Local officials, builders face U.S. subpoenas

Federal investigation under way in Wheeling Copyright 1973, by Paddock Publications, The Heraid.

A team of Herald reporters and editors has been investigating political corruption in Wheeling for the past six months. The information the team compiled has been turned over to federal investigators and the U.S. Attorney's office.

The investigative team included Herald staffers Roger Capcitini, James Vesely, Bob Casey, Barry Sigale, Anne Slavicek, Rich Honack, Lea Tonkin, Lynn Arinof and Jill Bettner.

All Wheeling village officials and every developer in the village in the past five years will be subpoenzed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged shake-downs of developers by public officials, a Herald investigation has disclosed.

The subpoents, many of which have been served, represent the latest step in an investigation of several months by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the U.S. Attorney's office.

The Herald has learned from reliable sources that indictments may be returned before the end of summer.

ASSISTANT U.S. Alty, Samuel Skinner told the Herald numerous subpoenas have been served on village officials, village employes and developers, in an effort to establish "evidence of extortion by public officials of moneys from citi-

Skinner said the investigation is one of "top priority" in his office and that several investigators and lawyers are working on the case full time.

He said the investigation began "several months ago" on the basis of "citizen reports."

"An additional source of information has been reporters from Paddock Publications who have, from time to time, provided information instrumental in the investigation," Skinner said Monday.

A subpoena already has been served on Village Mgr. George Passelt, directing him to produce all pertinent village records. Additionally, federal investigators late last week were trying to locate former trustees William Hart and Michael Valenza to serve them with subpoenns, the Herald has learned.

SEVERAL AREA developers, who the Herald will not identify, have made statements in the U.S. Attorney's office and more are expected in coming weeks.

While Skinner has refused to outline scope and direction of the investigation, the Herald has learned federal investigators are seeking to apply the Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Act against public officials who place pressure on contractors who apply to the village for permission to build.

The Hobbs Act specifically prohibits obtaining property from another person even with his consent, "Induced by the wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence or fear or under color of official right." Punishable by fines up to $10,000 and 20 years in prison, or both, that section of the U.S. Code has been used frequently in the past to gain convictions of public officials who extorted money to guarantee favorable zoning and building approval. Herald reporters have also learned investigators have developed a picture of the general pattern of alleged shakedowns of developers by public officials

Who's who in village politics

WILLIAM O. HART

A village trustee from 1968 to 1970, Hart moved to Florida, then returned to Wheeling a year later in 1971. He currently runs Night and Day Electric Sign Inc. of Wheeling along with Michael Valenza. His past official activities have included three years on the fire and police commission. He first moved to Wheeling in 1956.

MICHAEL VALENZA

A key figure for the last 10 years in approval of new developments in the village, Mike Valenza left the village board this spring when his term expired. He was first elected on a ticket with Village President Ted C. Scanion in 1969. Valenza had moved to Wheeling 10 years earlier, and joined the village plan commission 1963. He served on the plan commission as its chairman and as acting director of planning until November, 1971.

TED C. SCANLON

In his ninth year as village president, Scanlon began his career in the village as police magistrate in a local court in the 1950s. Another 40-year resident of the village, Scanion also served on the park board and as assistant director of Civil Defense. He currently works for Asplundh Tree Expert Co. He was first elected village president in 1965, ran unopposed for reelection in 1969, and won the seat again in the April elections.

GEORGE PASSOLT

Named Village Manager in November, 1971, Passolt began his career with the village as a part time village treasurer in 1965. In 1969 he became finance director under village manager Matthew Golden, then became acting village manager in 1970. Passolt worked 19 years for U. S. Gypsum before going to work full time for the village.

Wheeling trustees react to records subpoena

Wheeling trustees reacted to the subpoena of village building and zoning records for a federal grand jury investigation with varying degrees of con-

Some trustees were reluctant to comment on the matter, saying that grand jury investigations were supposed to remain secret. Others said the investigation appeared to be a routine matter and expressed little concern.

Members of the village board were notifled of the subpoena in a confidential memo sent by Village Mgr. George Pas-

TRUSTEE ED Berger said he had been advised of the subpoena a week or so ago. "I really don't know what's going on down there," he said. "I'm always concerned about something like this because it can always give the village a black eye if they find something."

When asked if he thought the investigation would reveal any wrongdoings, Berger said, "I really don't know. I don't really know what they are looking for. I wish I knew."

Trustee Bill Hein said he was told that the investigation was similar to that being conducted in other towns, "I understand they are going through other municipalities," he said. "It's a matter of procedure. I don't know the implications of it as far as what they are doing down there."

TRUSTEE DON Jackson said he was advised the records had been subpoenaed. He said, however, he could not comment further because of the secrecy

According to Trustee John Koeppen, Wheeling is just one of several villages being investigated. "I think every village is being contacted," he said. "I was advised that they are checking into all of the towns."

Village Pres. Ted Scanlon said he knew nothing about the matter except that the records had been requested. He said he had no comment except that he had not personally received a subpoena. When asked if any action had been taken by the village on the subpoena, Scanlon said, "I don't know. That's Mr. Passolt's

Local expert at Boys State convention

by LINDA PUNCI

In 1904, three American Legionnaires organized a statewide meeting of high school boys for the purpose of teaching "constructive attitudes toward the Amer-Ican form of government."

Nearly 40 years later - in the year of Watergate and the Kerner scandal - the American Legion Premier Boys State is still trying to bolster faith in the American way of government.

Albert Smedley, 503 S. Pine St., Mount Prospect, an expert on electoral procedures, will be one of several area men participating in the 1973 convention this week in Springfield.

WIIILE MANY people view political scandals as a blot on the American political record. Smedley considers them a valuable lesson in government.

"I think now - since we've had Kerner, the county clerk and all the others - there's more of an awareness of this type of thing," he said. "It's just a situation citizens are faced with. They have to be sure how their money is being spent."

Corruption may be an inherent weakness in a system where elected officials must rely on appointees, according to Smedley.

Albert Smedley

"My thinking is that every elected officlal - whether he be President or a local town official - has to have assistance from appointed help," he said. "As long as you have appointees, some of them are bound to go wrong.'

An educational consultant for the Frank Thornber Co., which specializes in training election judges, Smedley has helped train election officials in Cook and surrounding counties. At Boys State, he will conduct five days of morning classes on the election process.

BOYS STATE participants are "very much interested in government," according to Smedley.

Despite the cloud hanging over the political scene, Smedley said he sees more youth going into politics.

"Young people aren't satisfied with the status quo - I see a great number of changes evident in our villages. There is more concern for senlor citizens, more interest in churches and in local government," he said.

Mrs. Edfors innocent of girls' deaths

Elaine Edfors, who escaped from Elgin State Hospital June 16, was found innocent of the Feb. 26 murders of her two daughters by reason of Insanity and will not stand trial for the murders. The Herald had erroneously reported she would be required to stand trial if ever found competent.

Rolling Meadows police said yesterday they had never been officially advised of the status and outcome of Mrs. Edfors' case but were aware that a coroner's inquest into the girls' deaths had ruled Mrs. Edfors would stand trial for the murders if ever declared competent.

The police were advised yesterday by Judge Louis Garippo that Mrs. Edfors was declared innocent of the crimes by reason of Insanity. She was ordered sent to Elgin Stato Hospital.

Police are continuing to search for Airs, Edfors, who escaped from the hospital 10 days ago.

Kidney patients eligible for Medicare

WASHINGTON (UPI) - An estimated 13,000 kldney patients will be eligible for Medicare payments beginning Sunday under the first extension of the health insurance program to persons under age 65, the government said.

The Health, Education and Welfare Department (HEW) issued regulations covering benefits to the newly eligible kidney patients at an estimated first-year cost of $250 million. HEW said 13,000 patients will be eligible by the end of this year and 8,000 to 10,000 annually there-

The order also freezes the number of eligible facilities at the current level of about 750 which provide artificial kidney kidney transplants.

"In order to minimize any unnecessary investment of proliferation of facilities and resources, facilities approved to provide kidney disease services will be limited to those currently providing them," Dr. Charles C. Edwards, assistant secretary for health, announced.

HEW Sec. Caspar W. Weinberger sald that virtually all persons under 65 with chronic kidney disease would become eligible for Medicare benefits, including payments for artificial kidneys and transplants.

"In the past, the high cost of these lifesaving procedures has prevented many persons from benefiting from them, and brought tremendous hardship to others,* Weinberger said.

Mail engagement leads to bush villages of the Congo

by MARY HOULIHAN

When Jean Wolford looks out of her kitchen window, she sees bush villagers of Zaire, formerly the Belgian Congo in Africa, carrying water buckets and farming small gardens.

She probably finds it hard to believe that a three-year engagement by mail to a Midwest minister could ever have taken her that far.

When Jean first began dating the now-Rev. Marvin Wolford in high school in her home town of Abingdon, Ill., her only thoughts were of settling down on a farm and having a few children.

BUT TODAY, Jean Wolford, married to the Rev. Wolford almost 16 years, expects surprise as a natural element in her life. She has lived in Zaire through two nationalistic uprisings, one in 1960, the other in 1968, and somehow she's managed to continue to look like a typical minister's wife.

Mrs. Wolford and her husband were in Mount Prospect last weekend for a visit during a missionary furlough from the Congo. Most of the weekend was spent telling members from Trinity United and South Community-Baptist churches about their lives in Zaire, and their needs in the church community in which they

"We're quite fortunate. We have a Methodist hospital where we live, and electric lights," said the Rev. Wolford.

"Our main job now is translating the Bible," he said. Under the Wolfords' direction the Bible has been translated into two languages and covers the local dlalects spoken by more than 10 tribes in the area in which he lives. More recently, the books of Genesis and Exodus, as well as commentary on the Old Testament have been translated and

ALONG WITH HIS many other activitles, Wolford is also a local district superintendent of the local village Method-

Ilis story of how he traveled from Abingdon to Zaire is interesting as well as surprising. Wolford, who all his life had planned on becoming a farmer, first

Before leaving for the Congo, he had little plans for becoming any kind of missionary. But one summer, while in college, he took a course at a university in Colorado. There, a minister leading the youth group he had foined told him about the missionary ministry.

"I told him I really wanted to farm, but he sent my name in anyway to the Board of Missians in New York, Wolford

"Several months passed and I assumed everything had fallen through and that was fine, but I heard fater that summer that I had been accepted."

Despite the fact that Wolford said he wasn't really that enthusiastic about the whole idea, "I felt I should do what I should," he said, so he went.

WHEN HE REACHED the Congo, he discovered that the people there were "extremely religious." "They already believed in God as creator and in eternal life. But they didn't know anything about Christ. This is what we brought them," Wolford explained.

Despite the people's religious leanings, things were still difficult. "I tried everything I learned on the farm and nothing worked," he said, "because of the soil and climate. But then I did some experimenting and did have some suc-

It took almost the entire three years he was working in the Belgian Congo to discover his vocation. "I had a conversion experience the last year I was there. I really became a Christian in my own personal life then." he said.

After the three-year stay, he returned to the United States to marry Jean. How did she feel about moving from Abingdon to the Belgian Congo for the rest of her

"I thought it was a pretty good idea because Marvin was going there," she

Jean was to meet her husband in New York the day he arrived from the Congo. She fully expected to be married in a church wedding, although she knew things were going to be a bit hectic with Wolford having to leave for Africa soon

But Jean got more than she bargained for. "We were married on the 'Bride and Groom' TV show," she explained, smiling. "It was wonderful for us because we didn't have any money at the time."

THE TV MARRIAGE came about when a friend of Jean's from Abingdon convinced her to write to the program, popular in the late 1950's, about her upcoming wedding. "Apparently they were interested when they heard Marvin had been in the Belgian Congo," she said.

The producers of the TV show called

Jean's father one Sunday night to tell him about his plan. "My father thought it was a joke when they called. But we were married four days after Marvin got home," she said.

The TV wedding set the pace for the madeap type of life the Wolford's were to live in the upcoming years.

"When we first went, we had to buy all our food in Zambia, about 1,000 mlles away, and truck it in," said Mrs Wolf-

She said it took her almost three years before she could communicate adequately with the people who lived in her village. "It's all you can do to adjust to a new society and keep things sanitary in your home, besides try to learn a language," she said.

HER THREE children, the last two of whom were born in Africa, had no difficulty adjusting though, "Since we're in a bush area, they have a lot of freedom out there. They get along just fine. In fact, one of the boys commented the other day that he liked the United States, 'But I wouldn't want to stay more than a year,' he said."

Today neither Jean nor her husband scem to miss having given up the slow pace of a farm in Abingdon, Illinois, for the mission field of Africa.

"We have no regrets. We feel we've done what we should have done," Wolf-

Get ready for a blitz.

The first wave is expected to hit at 0900 hours Saturday when a throng of 40,000 to 60,000 people will begin funneling through the turnstyles to see the country's greatest horse, Secretariat.

For that one day, Arlington Pork Race Track, Arlington Heights, Ill., will be the horse racing capital of the country.

A flurry of special preparations were reported yesterday from a variety of sources, including local police departments, nearby hotels and motels, bus lines and the railroad, overseas National Air Lines and just about everyone connected with the special match race.

With the excitement there was also tel reservations and even who Superhorse Secretariat will race against in the $100,000 event.

"WHAT MORE CAN I tell you except that we're sold out," said one advance sales ticket agent yesterday, despite the fact that tickets originally were not supposed to go on sale until today.

Even when tempted with an offer to pay "scalpers' " prices, the agent was unable to produce two clubbouse tickets.

Another Ucket agent at Bond's clothing store. State and Jackson in Chleago, reported yesterday that he still had plenty of tickets. And Tom Rivera, public relations director at Arlington Park, said tickets will be available at the track today through Saturday.

"We'll have room for everybody," Rivera promised.

The crowd will converge on Arlington Park by train, bus and automobile and additional carriers were being scheduled

"WE ARE GOING to add an extra train on Saturday," said Richard Krehl, manager of passenger service for the Chicago and North Western Ry. "Normally we run three extra trains on Saturday, but we will definitely add a fourth."

With the extra trains will also come extra cars. Together they will be able to accommodate an additional 1,600 passen-

"I hope that is enough," Krehl sald.

A spokesman for Engle Bus Lines, which brings racings fans to Arlington Park from Chicago's Loop, South and West sides, said the company will be running 11 or 12 buses Saturday.

But most racing fans will arrive by car and it will be the job of the Arlington

partments to do what they can to avoid what could be one of the worst race track traffic jams in memory.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Chief Lewis Case said he will have 10 extra men directing traffic Saturday and will assign patrol cars at special points.

Five men will be directing inbound traffic and five handling outbound cars, sald Rolling Meadows Traffic Supervisor Andrew Herbert who added that beyond that, "we're just going to play it by car; that's all we can do."

Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber said regular holiday race track patrols will be augmented with additional it mis men will the street earlier than usual because of the 9 a.m. track opening.

Secretariat himself will arrive at O'Hare International Airport about 1:30 p.m. Thursday on an Overseas National Airlines charter flight. In the past Secretariat has had a DC-9 jet freighter to himself but this time he will be sharing it with four other horses and a couple of grooms, an airline spokesman said.

WIIILE AT Arlington Park, the SG mllllon horse will be under what Rivera termed "very tight security."

Saturday's race is a bonanza for hotels and motels close to the track most of which were sold out of rooms days ago.

"We're overbooked right now," said a reservations clerk at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, located next door to the

At the nearby Howard Johnson's In Palatine, a desk clerk said reservations were way above normal.

As preparations build toward his appearance at Arlington Park Saturday, it becomes ever more clear that Secretariat is a giant among horses, at the gate as well as on the track.

Awaiting records, says Valenza

TOP fund report slated next week

A report on the finances of the To Overall Progress Party (TOP) for April's village election will still not be available until at least next week.

Michael Valenza, who served as TOP campaign manager, said he will not release any information on the finances until the campaign records are complete.

"I don't plan on doing anything until I get to the records," he said. "I'm not go-Ing to make any estimate over the phone."

TOP treasurer Roberta Krause said she will turn the records over to Valenza as soon as a few outstanding checks clear the bank. She said she expected those checks to be cleared in the bank statement for the month of June, which she said would probably arrive next VALENZA HAS repeatedly delayed releasing the financial records of the TOP campaign. Immediately after the April 17 election. Valenza said the records would be available by the beginning of May. Since then he has delayed releasing the records a half dozen times or more.

Mrs. Krause said that while there are records of how much the party spent and how much was collected in donations, she was not at liberty to provide this information.

"That has to come from Mike." she said. "That was the arrangement."

All five candidates on the incumbent TOP ticket said they had nothing to do with the finances either during or after the campaign. They said they had not been contacted by Valenza about releasing the records and could provide no further information.

THE FINANCES of the TOP party came into question when candidates of the opposing Wheeling Independent Party challenged the amount of money being spent by the TOP party during the campaign. The WHIP candidates noted that TOP held several large cocktail parties, distributed substantial amounts of campaign literature, and erected several large campaign signs in the village.

The WHIP party released its financial records before the April 17 election. The WHIP treasurer reported that the party spent $985 during the campaign. WHIP candidates noted their expenses were kept to a bare minimum. Throughout the campaign, TOP candidates merely stated that their campaign funds came from the donations of TOP supporters.

EVELYN DIENS, who was reelected village clerk, said last week finances were never discussed during any of the campaign meetings. "At the meetings I attended. I was not asked any questions nor was I involved in any discussion of the TOP finances," she said. "I have never seen the books in any campaign and I have never asked to. I have never concerned myself about it.'

Mrs. Diens said she knew the contributions which financed the campaign "came from friends, but I don't know what friends.

Other TOP candidates supported Mrs. Diens statements that party finances were never discussed during campaign

When asked why finances were never discussed, Valenza said "It never came up." He said there was no special reason why the candidates were not kept up to date about campaign expenses.

Young reacts to Anderson's column

U. S Rep. Samuel II. Young, R-10th, has forwarded a copy of a lengthy letter he sent to syndicated columnist Jack Anderson following an Item in Anderson's column which charged that Young tried to "emasculate" a bill dealing with control of toxic substances because of special interests.

Anderson had linked contributions to the Young campaign by two firms in his district with chemical interests to amendments submitted by the freshman congressman to the Toxic Substances Act gressional campaign battles in the na-

The columnist pointed out that Daniel J. Terra, president of Lawter Chemicals in Northbrook, and Foster, past president of American Hospital Supply, had given a total of $14,200 to Young's campaign. (Young's office has estimated his total campaign expenditures at approximately $160,000, a sum similar to that spent by his Democratic opponent, Abner J. Mikva, in one of the most expensive con-

Only one of the five amendments submitted by Young to the subcommittee of the House Finance and Commerce Committee was incorporated into the bill.

ALL FIVE WERE relatively complex, but the main point of Young's rebuttal to Anderson was, "Neither (Terra or McGaw), nor any representatives of their companies, ever discussed the Toxic Substance Control Act of 1973 with me. I doubt that either one of them knew the bill was pending."

Young told Anderson that both Terra and McGaw represent large firms which are able to meet the provisions of the bill, though it may work hardships on some smaller firms. He said that in spite of objections to some provisions which he feels are difficult for small businesses, he voted for the act in final form

Young then made a point which seems worth consideration for any member of Congress:

"It must be kept in mind," he wrote to Anderson, "that not only the 1,600 people who contributed to my campaign, but also the approximately 120,000 persons who voted for me have different views on different issues facing the Congress. No matter what way I vote, I will please some and displease others.

DON'T LOOK NOW, but there is a state election coming up.

Cook County Republicans already are on the prowl for candidates for the state legislature and Cook County offices in the 1974 elections.

Cook County Republican Chairman Edmund J. Kucharski has appointed a 26Rep. Samuel member Search Committee to enlist possible candidates for slating by the party in 1974.

H. Young

The committee is headed by Chicago attorney Joseph A. Tecson, delegate to the 1970 Constitutional Convention and chairman of the 1972 county slatemaking body.

Among its members are Richard A. Cowen, Wheeling Township committeeman; Ethel Kolerus, Wheeling Township supervisor and president of the Township Officials Organization: State Rep. Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights; Floyd T. Fulle, Maine Township committeeman, and David E. Brown, New Trier Township committeeman.

In addition to the state legislature, the 1974 election will include races for state treasurer and U.S. Senator, with Adlai Stevenson up for reclection.

County offices to be filled include the entire county board of commissioners. county board president, county clerk, assessor, sheriff, treasurer, superintendent of schools and the two posts on the tax appeals board.

Education Today

Every so often I run Into something that seems to require profound comment - but I'm often at a loss to think of what

Last week I received a copy of a book that falls into that category. Its title is "Confrontation - The Destruction of a College President," by Ken Metzler (Nash Publishing Co.)

Ken Metzier is one of my former journalism professors - he taught me magazine editing (or at least tried to teach me) The college president of the title is Charles Johnson, who was acting pressident of the University of Oregon in Eugene. Ore , during my junior year at that school — 1968-69.

The book, therefore, is something that has to have some curiosity value for me - it's my life as history. Metzier even refers to me briefly in the book, but I'll forgive him for that.

THE "PLOT" OF the book is fairly simple. The 1968 60 school year was the year before the killings of students at Kent State. On almost every campus in the country there was student unrest and Oregon was no exception.

Johnson went from crisis to crisis that year, always staying outwardly cain, never calling the police and negotiating his way out of confrontations. The stu-dent activitists, as I recall, didn't always agree with him, but they respected him as a man who would listen to their views.

Johnson served as acting president for just that one year. He came under lire from state legislators and alumni who felt he was "soft" The state board of higher education passed over him for the permanent appointment - and, two days after presiding over the graduation ceremonies that June, Charles Johnson drove his Volkswagen into the mountains and was killed when he ran head-on into a log

Metzler does more than just narrate the events, however. He describes Johnson the man and his reactions to the stress he was placed under. By the end of the book, he has succeeded in drawing a picture of a man who once joked about elves in an old tree stump in his front yard and at another time ended up sobbing uncontrollably into his wife's arms declaring that "I hate myself for this."

II' THE BOOK were a novel, an obvious reaction would be to say Metaler has created life-like characters. But Metder has done something that is more difficult than that He has written about real people as though they were real people - they don't sound like characters in a book

The book seems to require some kind of profound comment, as I said in the beginning One of the problems, however, is that I really can't think of anything profound No. the book did not make me see that year, 1968 69, in a different perspective, but it did make me see a man in a different perspective.

Does the book have any meaning for anyone who didn't live through the events it describes? I've asked myself that question, and I think the answer is probably yes. It is an interesting story and as such has the same kind of appeal as a good novel.

But more than that, it gives a picture of a public official under pressure - and of the kind of unpredictable things a person's mind can do to him under those circumstances. We have plenty of public officials under pressure today at all levels - we need to learn about some of the possible reaction.

ALSO, METZLER sheds some light on the nature of student unrest that plagued campuses during the 1960s. Some of the activists are stupid and dangerous, that stereotype doesn't often hold up. The black student who "disrupted" the graduation ceremonies was the man to lower the university flag to hall-must when Johnson dled two days later.

Longer, definitive histories of the late 1960s have already been written. This book is just one small piece of the overall events of that time.

However, history is made up of individunls. And for that reason this book makes a contribution. The individuals in this book may well in some ways stand for all the other individuals who suffered through a period of crisis.

Maybe that's all the profundity anyone needs to appreciate the book.

"Your message is loud and clear," he writes them in reply, "but legal determi-monts are such that I cannot but deny your special request."

IN DIANE'S CASE, Wendland said he forwarded her plea on to the Osmond's manager and it will be up to him whether the young girl's romantic dream will come true.

"R's completely out of our hands," he said, explaining that "once you start opening the gates, it's really a Pandora's

Earl Johnson, director of the Arlington Heights Chamber which is managing advance ticket sales for the Future of America Fair, says be has received "six or seven dozen bleeding heart requests from all over" to meet the Osmonds.

"One mother has called me twice to say that her daughter's birthday falls on the same day the Osmonds are going to be here and she just can't think of a better birthday present than her daughter meeting Donny Osmond," he said.

Donny, 15, is the youngest of the five brothers who have 16 gold record albums to their credit, each one signifying over one million sales.

DIANE HAllVEY'S heart-felt "please" filled a stack of notebook paper a halfinch high and cost 96 cents to mail, Johnson said.

"She explained that she was doing this because she hopes this will get her in to meet Donny. At the end of the letter she counted 30,300. It was unbelievable."

Wendland says he doubts that Diane or any of the other Osmond fans will actually be able to meet their singing stars. If any arrangements are made, it's up to the group's managers, he says.

The Osmonds record-shattering career was launched on the Andy Williams TV show a number of years ago. Since then, hits like "Crazy Horses," "One Bad Apple" and "Puppy Love" have stirred the hearts of pre teens across the coun-

What kind of crowd are they expecting at Arlington Park Aug. 24?

Wendland says, "It should be great."

Realignment still needed

A decision about realigning the dence to support his claim. Cook County Board now must come from the courts, and we hope they'll act more responsibly than the board itself has acted.

For purely political reaons the board last week rejected a realignment which would have increased the suburban vote by one while trimming the Chicago block by one - a rejection which can only be interpreted as political.

It is a political move because the shift represents one more Republican and one less Democrat on the board — and no other believable excuse has been offered for the board's action beyond "politics."

Granted, John Stroger, a Chicago Democrat, reasoned that a census undercount justified the decision to reject the board's realign-

But, as County Board President George Dunne pointed out, there's room to believe that the same undercount could have occurred in the suburbs. Dunne and the other five commissioners who didn't vote along political lines must realize Stroger offered no supporting evi-

If the courts rule against Stroger's position, new board composition would mean that the six suburban Republicans would hold a veto power over the county budget - thus, the Democrats are understandably going to try every trick to forestall the inevitable reapportionment.

That's what Stroger and other commissioners have done for the past couple months, following Comr. Floyd Fulle's introduction of the realignment resolution. Until June 14, however, only Stroger obstructed passage. Now he's been joined by enough other Democrats to block the move.

We commend Comr. Fulle for his decision to seek legal action to speed the realignment. On the figures available, it's the only fair move to allow the suburbs to have voting power equal to the suburban population.

Indeed, there are wise Democratic voices on the board that recognize the fallacles in Stroger's reasoning. Dunne's vote against Stroger's motion may represent an appeal to a suburban constituency for his reelection bid in 1974, but whatever the motivation, we support his vote.

On May 18, the Herald suggested that delaying tactics "could have predictable was "vetoing tactics." Now we go to the courts for, hopefully, a swift decision; it's unfortunate that eight Democrats have created a need for this action.

'Political' envoys

The venerable, if not exactly "time-honored," custom of rewarding political contributors with ambassadorships may be on the way out, and few there are who will mourn it.

A pending policy statement by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, already accepted in principle by the State Department, would permit only 15 per cent of ambassadorships to be drawn from outside Foreign Service ranks (compared with a current average of 30 to 35 per cent for noncareer appointments).

In addition, any nominee for an ambassadorship who contributed more than $10,000 to a campaign would be viewed as unacceptable by the committee.

To repeat, few will regret the passing of the old system, except perhaps those "fat cats" who felt that the prestige of the thing or the social class it gave them entree to was worth what it cost them to maintain their posts (more about that below).

However, because everyone these days has been primed to believe the worst about politicians, and political contributors, it should be pointed out that the conferring of diplomatic plums in return for those practices which, like Topsy, just growed and was not necessarily the product of conscious evil.

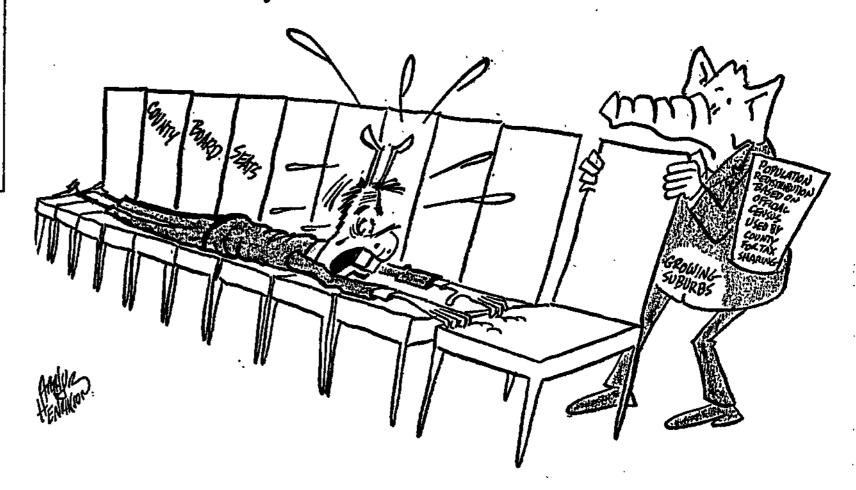

It was a self-feeding process: Because a stingy and moralistic Congress consistently refused to provide the funds necessary to run the nation's foreign embassies, particularly in the department of entertainment, only rich men willing to dig into their own pockets could afford to be ambassadors.

Or maybe it was the other way around: Because an ambassadorship was a convenient way to reward a political contributor, and since most contributors were perforce well-heeled, the Lemonade Lucies in Congress were able to score points with the public by refusing to vote enough funds to run an embassy in the manner in which the members of the international diplomatic set had accustomed themselves (even if it was only nibbling free sandwiches at the traditional Fourth of July open-

Whichever way it happened, the result was the same.

But if the fat cats no longer underwrite a significant part of the nation's diplomatic functioning, that means Congress will have to - and that brings us back where campaign donations was one of the whole thing started.

They're all mine! Mamaaaa!

Senator Byrd a Watergate hero

by CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The near-success of the Haldeman-Ehrlichman team in imposing their authoritarian policies on the United States should frighten the American people, the Congress and the

While the press is congratulating itself on helping to upset the Nixon Administration's "game plan," It might ask how it was possible for the dictatorial due to enjoy success for so long by use of secrecy and Image building.

L. Patrick Gray III, the politically pliable former Navy captain, came very close to winning Senate confirmation as permanent FBI director with all that could have meant to the Nixon Administration in keeping the truth about the Watergate buried.

In February, Pat Gray had such apparent support that even the liberals in the Senate Judiciary Committee were concerned that opposition to him might be politically hazardous.

Somehow, large numbers of newspaper editors and columnists bought the line that Gray's appointment would mean "a nice guy" would finally be heading the Overlooked were his plainly political speeches in the 1972 campaign and his absurd statistical defense of the thoroughness of the FBI probe of Watergate,

It is now apparent that Pat Gray was an essential part of the cover-up of Watergate, with his destroying of records, sending FBI investigative reports to been predicted." What was also White House Counsel John W. Dean III assurances to Watergate co spirators that their cover story was hold-

The unsung hero in unwinding Pat Gray's cleverly concocted deceptions was Senator Robert Byrd, Dem.-W. Va., a hardworking, methodical moderate.

Byrd spent hours at the homework necessary to break through Gray's vague generalizations on his relatons with the White House staff in the weeks immediately after the June 17, 1972, burglarybugging at the Watergate.

Senators Edward M. Kennedy, John Tunney, Phil Hart and other liberals on the Sonate Judiciary Committee used good judgment in permitting the more moderate Senator Byrd to take the lead at a time when strongly partisan criticism of Gray from anti-Nixon liberais might have had an adverse public reac-

From the beginning, there was little likelihood that Acting FBI Director Gray could or would conduct an aggressive and objective investigation. His conflict of interest was as plain as his desire to he appointed permanent director upon the re-election of his friend and benefactor, Richard Nixon.

That meant the old Navy bureaucrat had to keep his fences mended with White House Chief of Staff H. R. (Bob) Haldeman and Special Assistant John D. Ehrlichman - the two most influential men in the Nixon White House.

Gray easily moved into the position of using statistics on the number of agents assigned to the Watergate probe and even reached the preposterous conclusion that anyone who charged a cover-up of Watergate was slandering all of the fine, hard working and dedicated men and women of the FBI.

In the light of Pat Gray's admission that he burned some Watergate files, it is interesting to review the story he told the Senate Judiciary Committee in February and March.

Only Senator Byrd's detailed question-

Mollenhoff

Without Senator Byrd's questioning Gray wouldn't have been pushed into the position of admitting that John Dean "probably lied" to the FBI officials who asked him if convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt had a White House office.

Dean had told the FBI agents he would "have to check" when in fact he and his assistants had opened Hunt's safe and desk in the White House complex only a few days earlier. Dean knew full well that they had found information and equipment that the FBI would need to pursue its investigation.

Gray's reluctant admission that Dean "probably lied" opened up a whole new range of questioning which led to the unanimous committee vote that "invited" Dean to appear.

The committee's unanimous vote came after President Nixon had said only a few days earlier he would not permit the White House counsel to appear for questioning under any circumstances because of "executive privilege."

Senator Sam Ervin, Dem.-N.C., dismissed Nixon's statements as "executive poppycock."

Such claims of "executive privilege" have been "executive poppycock" throughout our history without support in either law or court decision. However, many unthinking editors and reporters accepted the Nixon Administration's selfserving declarations of this corruptive secrecy, as they have in the past, as a natural extension of the doctrine of separation of powers.

President Nixon, Attorney General John N. Mitchell, Ehrlichman and Haldeman had reason to believe that the defense of "executive privilege" work again to obstruct justice.

A wide range of editors and columnists had defended the rights of Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson to pull down arbitrarily the secrecy curtain and hide corrupt and questionable political deals about which they did not want the public and the Congress to know.

As a starting point on a self-analysis of press performance on the whole Watergate affair, two questions should be

-Did you endorse the nomination of Pat Gray as permanent FBI director prior to March, 1973?

-Did you support the President's claims of an executive privilege to refuse to make an accounting to Congress?

If you answer either of those questions in the affirmative, you were part of the Watergate problem and owe a special debt to Senator Bob Byrd for saving the nation from "four more years" of Watergate tactics or worse. (Released by The Register and Tribune

Old-fashioned Fourth ø T

"Louisville has its Derby and Indianapolis has its '500,' " according to Tom Wellman's column, June 18, and Hoffman Estates has its all-day July 4 celebration devoted to giving the people of Schaumburg Township an old fashioned Fourth of July.

Last year Hoffman Estates Police Chief John O'Connell estimated a crowd of 35,000 people came and went at different times throughout the day. All enjoyed free activities including free bingo, watermelon eating contest, a magic show, a teen dance, children's races, tug of war, baseball games.

Free drum and bugle corps exhibition and a free teen swim party with a musical combo at the community pool were also offered.

The Lions Club, Jaycees, Hoffman Estates Woman's Club, Hoffman Estates Athletic Association, park district, village, the Conant Boosters, the Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township and the Schaumburg Township Democratic Organization were some of the many organizations which sponsored the free activities, under the direction of the Independence Day Committee, an autonomous organization that meets monthly throughout the year to provide one day's celebration.

The day began with a parade, in which Paddock Publications won a trophy for best commercial float, and ended with a massive $1,500 fireworks display. This year $2,900 has been allotted for that

In speaking of his summer festival in the Northwest suburbs, Mr. Wellman said the purpose of the festival "is to have a good time, eat a lot of food, drink large quantitles of beer and to sociallze." That is what we with our Fourth of July summer festival, if you will, have been doing for the last 14 years.

He says the Northwest suburbs have no such annual rite. I believe we do. Many families invite friends and relatives here to participate in the day's festivities and we can't forget the 80 sailors from Great Lakes Navai Base who annually are entertained by township families and who otherwise would be in a strange area without anyone to care.

Energy gluttons must go on diet now

by LEA TONKIN Second of two parts

We're energy gluttons, lapping it up at record rate for heat, light and power. Unfortunately, there isn't enough power go around.

What this means for individual consumers and industry is the uncertainty of short supply and the certainty of rising

Right now, there are numerous solutions to the shortage. Power experts feel a national effort is needed to ease the

While everyone awaits the appointment of a federal "energy czar," current efforts could be lumped into three areas: seeking out new sources of fossil fuel, which now supplies, most of our power needs; developing new power resources, and conservation.

Gas and electric utility customers have been told about the promising development of new and existing sources of fuel. In the conservation effort, consumers are directly involved. BACK IN THE good old days (two years ago), Northern Illinois Gas Co. (NI-Gas) used to advertise for new customers, and nobody at Commonwealth Edison Co. hinted to customers that they could cut down on energy consumption. Now everyone is talking about fuel conservation.

To the individual homeowners, Edison and NI-Gas offer suggestions on how to save fuel. For the large commercial or industrial natural gas customer, however, the message is blunt: no longer can they expect to consume as much of this clean-burning fuel as they would like. NI-Gas has a waiting list of several hundred industries. A petition before the Illinois mission to cut off NI-Gas supplies to Commonwealth Edison and a 25 per cent curtailment to 140 large customers on a contingency basis.

RECOGNIZING the need for conservation education, NI-Gas started a program to encourage large volume customers to seek the advice of engineers Bud Wulff and Harlan Benson and their staff, "We'll work with anyone who wants to conserve energy," says Wulff.

"Many of the existing buildings are gross wasters of energy," Wulff says. Of course, cost is usually the major consideration. But in the future, they (planners) ought to look at total energy optimization."

When energy was cheap it was the last consideration in the design of new buildings, he added. Now the cost and shortage of fuel is forcing executives to take a look at conservation.

In existing buildings, the potential for fuel and cost savings is tremendous. A systems approach is used by Wulff and fellow engineers to work out the best power usage.

The architect, mechanical engineer and the building owner can combine efforts to design an efficient plant, says Wulff. This concept of conservation by design is shared by Wilbert Hasbrouck, executive director of the American Institlte of Architects in Chicago.

"ENERGY CONSERVATION is more than just turning off a light bulb," says Commerce Commission requests per- Hasbrouck. "It's taking a look at our processes and facilities to see how much energy is consumed.

"We have the responsibility of literally rebuilding just about every building in the next hundred years," he continued. By the conservation and readaptotion of structures, you save the energy required to build a new building."

The same considerations should go into the planning for a new office building or factory, he added. For example, the use of aluminum on a building exterior may save air conditioning costs because of its reflective qualities. But the production of aluminum requires a great deal more energy than the alternative, steel.

Architects can work with industry to dairy to use cardboard cartons rather than glass bottles.

THE CONCEPT THAT immediate cost savings may mean greater expenses for fuel and maintenance in the future is "a very difficult thing to get though to a layman or a hard-headed businessman," the architect said. "Nobody really cares how much it costs to operate a building.

Because of the tax laws, it may benefit the company to lose money on the build-Hosbrouck says necessity, rather than logic, is forcing a change in this attitude. Higher fuel costs and cutbacks have begun only recently to change corporate at-tudes in the past year. "All of us are inherently selfish," said Hasbrouck. "We want the jobs that come with a new plant. What we'll eventually be talking about, though, is planning on the basis of long range environmental Inflation is today's big worry. Uppermost in the minds of most Americans, if the pollsters are right, are worries about where we're going from here, and questions about what each of us can do. individually, to protect ourselves.

You could have had your worries cranked up another few notches if you'd been present at a recent conference in Dollas, to hear Sidney Homer on the subject of inflation, controls and devalua-

Homer is regarded as one of the wisest heads on Wall Street. He recently retired from active management, as a partner, of Salomon Brothers, the investment banking firm.

Salomon Brothers handles somewhat less money during the year than the U.S. Treasury, but has a more impressive record - in recent times, at least-of doing the right things with it. It occupies its eminent position in the world of finance because people like Sidney Homer have been more right, more often, than the economists you generally see quoted in the newspapers...usually speaking from Washington.

IT IS WELL to have an appreciation of Mr. Homer's credentials, because you aren't going to want to believe what he said at the conference. Historically, inflations around the world can be catalogued as five kinds, by size, he sald, Following nominal inflation, and then moderate - 2 to 4 per cent - come: "No. 3, the large inflations, say 5 to 10 per cent: No. 4, the so-called South American inflations of, say, 11 per cent and up; and No. 5, the total inflations of close to 100 per cent such as occurred in Germany, Russia and France after World War I.

"We now seem to be in the large inflation category and our inflation rate is rising. Unless our fight against inflation achieves top priority. I can see no assurance at all that we will not achieve a South American rate of inflation,"

This was said, you might bear in mind, four days before we all learned that wholesale prices had been rising at the rate of 24 per cent a year.

WIIILE HOMER doesn't want to be quoted as saying that he firmly expects such a calamity as South Americanstyle inflation here, he says that he does "not go along with the kiea that runaway inflation here is impossible." The only thing to prevent its happening is firm, decisive action by those with the authority to take such action. "Over the past five years," says Homer, "there have been many official programs to fight inflation and all have been administered on a compromise basis and, therefore, all have failed."

He recalls the vogue, a few decades ago, for the "scientific faith healing" of Emile Cone, who had half the country going around saying, "Every day, in every way, I'm getting better and better." An optimistic frame of mind, he ad-

Virginia Macdonald lives a hectic pace

by MONICA WILCH

SPRINGFIELD—It all looks very glamorous as glimpsed through the medla, being a legislator. A very pleasing egotrip studded with an appreciable amount of fame, power and spending money and no more work than one can comfortably fit in between public appearances and socializing.

That's a nice fairy tale, but anyone who believes it ought to spend a day following a legislator like Virginia Macdonald, Republican representative from Arlington Heights.

Take it from someone who did. Being a legislator is plain hard work. And being a really exceptional legislator like Virginia Macdonald is positively grueling. For me it started at 7 p.m. on a state office building in Springfield. She had just got out of a committee meeting, and I managed to catch up with her just before she dashed off to another one.

Wednesday when I met Virginia in the

The second of the second second

The Commission on the Organization of the General Assembly convened at 7:30 to discuss the problem of the ever-expanding work of the Illinois legislature, a supposedly part-time body of citizen lawmakers which is turning into a full-time body of professional politicians.

Virginia isn't a member of this commission, but the issue is an important one that will directly affect not only the legislators themselves but every citizen in Illinois. So Virginia was there, because she was interested.

"The legislature is now a full-time job." she told me, "and representatives will have to accept that. I certainly wouldn't want to exclude doctors and lawyers and other professionals from the legislature, but we just can't expect to be home at 6 every evening."

And so for the next two hours we heard proposals to limit the length of the sessions, to limit the number of bills introduced, to limit the nature of bills introduced in the second session and even a suggestion of moving the capital north.

It was after 10 when we finally sat down to dinner — the first chance Virginia had had to eat all day. And she talked about being a legislator.

She was a freshman this year, serving for the first time in an elective office. How does one know what to do?

"IT WAS SINK or swim," she said. Although there is an "orientation" for new legislators, that was "a lot of speeches and pontificating," she recalled. "They didn't tell us practical things we needed to know about procedures."

She said some legislators were most helpful to her, but on the whole, "they were all looking out for their own interests," especially because of the battle over the election of a speaker, which split the GOP into two camps.

But Virginia had one advantage to help her through those first hectic weeks. She had served as a delegate to the Illinois Constitutional Convention, so she knew thoroughly the document under which she was working.

"Con-Con was a really exciting experience. It was a one-shot deal, one chance in 100 years to do the right thing, to write a document that would serve the people well both now and in the future. I think the delegates were all very committed to do what they felt was best. And, of course, they were not running for office, and there wasn't any money involved" — the kinds of pressures that Influence legislation.

IT WAS AFTER midnight when our day ended, and breakfast came at 8 the next morning. We ate with Rep. Adeline Geo-Karis, R-Zion, who later said of her colleague, "Virginia works like a dog, and she is so big-hearted and always fair. She would never hurt anybody."

The first order of business Thursday was a session on the floor of the House of Representatives beginning at 9:30. And Virginia Macdonald was there before 9:30, to organize materials at her desk, piled with a foot and a half of bills and amendments.

It takes concern, planning, and sacrifice for legislator to be at the right place at the right time. To be late on the floor or to leave the floor for any reason can mean missing a crucial vote. During third readings of bills recently, Virginia said, she spent 12 to 14 hours sitting at her desk on the floor, either foregoing food or having it sent up.

("People visiting the galleries sometimes think it's terrible that we are down times think it's terrible that we are down here eating — they don't realize that it's impossible for us to leave all day.")

Visitors also have been known to consider the floor of a general assembly a three-ring circus where legislators wander around chatting with each other, oblivious to whatever business is being conducted.

The observer's mind would no doubt be boggled if he knew all the demands being made on the legislator's time and attention, which he is trying to stretch as far as possible as he dashes about the floor.

For Virginia, there were numerous conferences with other legislators regarding the progress of various bills she sponsors or co-sponsors; decisions as to what moves to make to achieve their passage; telephone calls from the press and staff aides; messages and materials being brought her by pages; and all the while one ear tuned to the bills being read and debated and votes being called, so that in the midst of doing something else, she would suddenly dart back to her desk to pull her voting lever on a bill.

And it appeared that each vote she registered was based on a thorough knowledge of the issue and an openminded but unshakeable conviction as to whether a "Nay" or a "Yea" would best serve her constituents.

"THERE IS A lot of pressure on me from this side of the aisle to change my vote," she was saying as the legislators voted on the issue of legislative scholarships — whether the recipient should be required to retain residency in the legislator's district for the duration of the scholarship.

"But I won't do it," she said as she voted against the amendment. "It's not right; it's putting politics first, and that's inconsistent with trying to take politics out of education. Whether that student is registered to vote in your district or not isn't a valid reason for rejecting him."

Virginia Macdonald works closely with her female colleagues in the General Assembly, a small but growing group of legislators who, she reports, seem to pose a threat to some male legislators.

According to Virginia and other women at the Capitol, they have been resented by some of the men and have had to do "ten times the amount of work as the men" to "prove" themselves. (And there still isn't a ladies washroom near the House chambers.)

But, according to veteran Sen. Esther Saperstein, D-Chicago, the new women in the House "are doing a wonderful job and it has made all the difference in the world."

Virginia and colleague Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, make the third district unique in having two women representatives.

WHEN THE HOUSE adjourned at 3:30, Virginia hurried off to her Committee on Agriculture and Natural Resources. She has pushed for flood control measures for the water-logged northwest suburbs and was the sponsor of the Scenic Rivers bill to preserve the natural beauty of Illinois waterways.

But whatever the issue, Virginia Macdonald is concerned. "There's a lot to do in Illinois," she says, and you get the feeling that this woman will not let down until the job is done — even if it takes a month of 20-hour days!

Chemist on UOP tour

An American's impressions of China

by MONICA WILCH
Do working mothers and day care centers bring about the destruction of the family?

Not necessarily. Not in China, according to a 12-member American delegation from Universal Oil Products in Des Plaines, who spent some two weeks on the Chinese mainland last month.

"Family life has not only not been broken up, it looks better there than in the U.S.," remarked the only woman member of the UOP team, Mrs, Hertha Skala,

A leading scientist in the field of catalysis and surface chemistry, Mrs. Skala is assistant director of research at UOP and one of the few American women who have visited China since President Nixon's historic trip to Peking.

"ONE OF THE most delighful things," recalled the soft-spoken Vienna-born scientist, was the children. Once when we were waiting for a taxl, we must have had 200 children crowded around us, smiling."

"What you see is a close relationship between parents and children. The children are well-behaved. I never saw any fighting among them, or crying." Other members of the delegation agreed with Mrs. Skala's impressions of family life in China, noting also that they frequently saw fathers out with their children.

And if neither parent is available to Robert W. Johnson, director of communications at UOP, recounted a conversation he had with one of the group's interpreters, a young Chinese woman.

"She told me about her husband, who is in the London consulate where she babysit, chances are a grandparent will.

is in the London consulate where she hopes to join him soon, and about her 4-year-old daughter, whom her mother babysits."

The Chinese were also extremely interested in American family life, Johnson said. "They want to see pictures of your wife and your children and your children's school and your home."

THE TRADITION OF the family,

HERTHA SKALA, a chemist with Universal Oil Products of Des Plaines, was impressed by the quality of family life during her recent tour of China with 11 other UOP scientists.

which has been the cornerstone of the Chinese culture for thousands of years, continues to cement both urban and rural life in China, according to the observations of the UOP group.

Especially in the country communes; as many as four generations may live together in a 4-room house, Mrs. Skala said. She described one she had visited:

"The first room we went in had a barbecue grill-like cooking facility, cupboards, a table and some chairs. The other rooms were mainly bedrooms, about 12 by 12, with beds built on top of a sort of adobe heating facility. There were some chairs, a table, a picture of Mao, and a radio. "A few places had a sewing machine, and that was their prized possession."

Mrs. Skala said the Chinese make their own clothes — blouses, pants, and Mao jacket. She said she saw no women wearing dresses. Other members of the team noted that Chinese adults all wear rather drab blue or gray clothing, although the children now are being dressed in brightly colored clothes.

"THE PEOPLE WERE all so friendly," Mrs. Skala kept saying, "and you got the feeling that even though these visits were all pre-arranged, the people really meant it... they would smile and shake hands and not stare at you with disgust like in many countries, even though they must have been trained for years to despise us."

But the most surprising thing to Mrs. Skala was that the people seemed so contented, even though they have very little choice in their lives. Most of them are pretty much tied to the land, except for the 30 per cent of the population concentrated in the cities.

Young people, explained Johnson, have four choices when they finish school: they can join the army, start a shop or business, go on to a university, or go into agriculture. And chances are even this limited choice will be made for them by the elders of their family or commune or by the government. Before they can go on to school and enter a profession or art, someone else must decide that they have the appropriate capabilities.

Women's independence

by KAY MARSH This July brings the 197th anniversary of the ratification of our Declaration of Independence. It also brings the 125th anniversary of another Declaration of Independence: the one signed July 19, 1849, at the first Woman's Rights Convention, held at Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Modeled on our own Declaration of Independence, the Seneca Falls Declaration of Sentiments and Resolutions begins, "When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one portion of the family of man to assume among the people of the earth a position different from that which they have hitherto occupied, but one to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle thom, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes that impel them to such

The declaration goes on to mention various "usurpations on the part of man toward woman" and details 14 grievances. It is interesting to note that most of the grievances listed then are no longor applicable. Now, for instance, women have property rights and access to coliege educations, both of which were lack-

THE RESOLUTIONS, however, could still be considered timely. Even today, many of us might sign a resolution that "such laws as conflict, in any way, with the true and substantial happiness of woman are contrary to the great precept of nature and of no validity." We would probably be even more apt to agree to a resolution that "woman is man's equal -was intended to be so by the Creator, and the highest good of the race demands that she should be recognized as

The Seneca Falls Declaration was written by Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott and signed by 68 women and 32 men. It is generally considered to have marked the official beginning of the women's rights movement, particularly the fight for woman's suffrage. Unofficially, the movement began long before. Some historians trace it back to ancient times. In modern history, credit is usually given to Mary Wollstonecraft, the 18th century author of "A Vindication of the Rights of Women."

BORN IN 1759, Mary Wollstonecraft died in 1797, a few days after giving birth to a girl child by philosopher William Godwin. Although she is remembered in some circles primarily as the mother of Mary Godwin, wife of Percy Bysshe Shelley and author of "Frankenstein," Mary Wollstonecraft was also one of the earliest feminists.

In a recent blography, "Mary Wellstonecraft," author-scholar Eleanor Fiexner calls her "the woman who first effectively challenged the age-old image of her sex as lesser and subservient human beings . . . She was alone in raising the issues that she did, in a period of social change first signalled by the rebellion of the American colonies . . . and then by the tremendous upheaval of the French Revolution." Miss Flexner goes on to say, "Hers was the only audible voice raised to assert that women, was well as men, had an inalienable right to freedom, that they, too, were human beings."

In this country, an early advocate for the rights of women was Ablgall Smith Adams, born in 1744. In her own way, Abigail was perhaps an even better raiser of issues. In a letter to her husband John, then a member of the Continental Congress, 1776, Abigail wrote:

"I LONG TO hear you have declared an independency, and by the way, in the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies, and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could. If particular care and attention are not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound to obey any laws in which we have no voice or representation."

'The ladies," of course, did "foment a rebellion" - a rebellion that resulted in the 1920 ratification of the 19th (woman's suffrage) Amendment.

Today, then, we do have voice and representation and the right to the elective franchise -- thanks in no small part to that Declaration of Sentiments and Resolutions approved at Seneca Falls 125

Robert, who is with the United Air Lines executive offices in Elk Grove, has been residing in Arlington Heights. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ernst, Vashon Island, Wash., he is a graduate of Dartmouth College with a master's from the University of Washington.

The couple's marriage took place June 2 in Our Lady of the Wayside Church at 11 a.m. The double ring service was followed by a luncheon reception for BS guests in Itasca Country Club.

FOR HER MARRIAGE Nancy chose a gown of summer satin with appliqued bodice and alceves, Fluted edging trimmed the neckline and cuffs and a deep flounce trimmed the skirt which ended in a train. A picture hat with satin draped around the brim formed a floorlength veil, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white pompons, stephanotis and daisles with accents of pick daisles.

Kathleen Dolan, Arlington Heights, was her sister's maid of honor, and the groom's sister, Elizabeth Ernst, Vashton, was bridesmaid. Both wore pink floral print gowns of organza with pink picture hats with deep pink streamers. They carried baskets of pink daisles.

William De Rohan, Denver, Colo., was hest man, and usher was the bride's brother, Daniel Dolan, Arlington Heights.

The Home Line by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: From reading your column I gather that you are a real "chocolaholic," so surely you have a good recipe for a chocolate souffle.

-Mrs. Armand Kilman The say you put it makes it sound s if I ought to rush out and join Chocolates Anonymous. But I do plead guilty with a yummy sigh. Here's one of the best I've ever lapped up:

Add one cup of sugar and a pinch of salt to six beaten egg yolks, beat until light and add one-half teaspoon of vanilla. Grate one cup of dark chocolate and melt over hot water. Add this to the egg mixture. When cool, fold in six beaten egg whites and pour into a well-buttered baking dish. Place the baking dish into a pan of boiling water and bake for 25 to 30 minutes at 350 degrees. You serve this one hot with a whipped-cream topping.

Dear Dorothy: Something's kooky about the way they build lights in evens. Twice now the light has broken when I've been cleaning my gas oven.

-Celia Beder

It may be just the effect of cold spray on a warm bulb, Celia. Next time, before you clean, either take out the bulb and squash a piece of foll into the opening or tuck foil around the bulb to protect it from the spray.

Dear Dorothy: All the talk about Epsom salts being dangerous makes me sure people have this product confused with something else. It has so many household uses we've always kept a box

Just last week I had a sore, swollen finger tip. Soaked it in a hot Epsom salts solution for 10 to 20 minutes. I wasn't too surprised to see a tiny piece of black show up near the fingernall - a sliver of some sort. Pulled it out - no more swell-

Hoffman Estates gala wasn't typical bachelor party

by DIANE STEFANOS

A 25-year-old Hanover Park bachelor threw an untypical bachelor's party Monday for 750 people.

"I'm still young at heart and I'm glad that there are things like this to do It makes me sad that I'm not young anymore to run around, but I can make friends to talk to and for that I am grateful," sald an #2-year-old woman guest.

Although uninterested in meeting available singles at this bachelor's party, this senior citizen's satisfaction came from reaching over to grasp the hand of the gray-haired lady sitting beside her as both smiled.

"Man, this is neat. I love to play basebull and eat hot dogs," said Scott, an #-year-old White Sox enthusiast. The only girl chasing that he and other little guys like him did at this party was running after girls, scaring them with ricadas they had caught and placed on twigs.

THIS GATHERING of young and old was a pienic given by Jim Kelly for 500 underprivileged children and 150 senior citizens from Chicago and the Northwest suburbs in a River Grove forest pre-

Kelly, of 7200 Jonquit Terr., just wanted "to do something for his fellow man" with his job bonus this year. So, he financially sponsored the picnic hoping "the people and the children here, by having fun together, can realize that race or background don't make any difference and that people can live together," said Kelly, an auditor for Touche, Ross & Co., a CPA firm in Chicago.

"It's a wonderful opportunity for the senior citizens and the kids to get outdoors and meet new people. We've been invited to and even have sponsored outings like this before, but I don't think any of us has ever heard of just one man sponsoring an event like this for so many people," said Sister Theresa of Chicago's Holy Family Church Senior Cltizen's Friendship Club.

Marilyn Devries, activity director at Chicago's St. Augustine's Home for the Aged said, "I'm sure that most of the senior citizen groups here today are like ours in that we offer them visiting entertalnment and trips to parks and theatres. Creative courses are offered and things like dances and fashlon shows are sponsored for these senior citizens.

"But, it's nice to have the elders and the children together. From our experience, the senior citizens enjoy the company and sight of the children at play."
SUPPORTED MAINLY by Catholic charities and private donations, St. Augustine's Home for the Aged and St. Charles Lewonga Parish in Chicago care for and medically attend the elderly who have no families, who are underprivileged and who need daily medical

Thirty-five senior citizens from a newly established senior citizen's Friendship Club of Holy Family Parish in Chicago, attended the picnic as its first official

"We're a social activities club for senlor citizens who are lonely and want to meet others and get out. This is a wonderful way to begin our club's activities, by meeting other senior citizens here today," said Roberta Daviston, the club's president.

While senior citizens engaged in strolls through the preserves, conversation and bingo games, children ranging in age from 5 to 14 took part in supervised games of their own. The black and the white, the Indian and the Puerto Rican child played together in volleyball games, softball games and hikes for which donated toy prizes were awarded. ALONG WITH THE games, everyone indulged in picnic favorites like hot dogs, hamburgers, potato salad and water-

The food for the picnic was cooked and supplied by Kelly's father, owner of the Nameless Restaurant in Melrose Park.

While the recorded sound track of the musical "Jesus Christ Superstar" blared over the public address system, Cook County Sheriff's policemen, in plain clothes, and friends of Kelly's helped to supervise the day's activities.

"This year is the first year we've helped to cosponsor activities like this, and we hope to continue to do it as long as we can find an organization or individual like Jim who is able to be the sponsor," said sheriff's policeman Dick Lowthorp. IN ADDITION, 30 young members of the Guardsman Drum and Bugle Corps Cadets from the northwest suburbs, of which Lowthorp is the manager, performed at the picnic. And the children present at the picnic, what did they have to say about it? Just about the same answer could be had from boys and girls allke. They all like picnics, they all like hotdogs and watermelon, they all like to play ball games in the outdoors, and they all enjoy making

And Jim Kelly? Well, he enjoys doing things for other people. He's a bachelor who doesn't mind giving picnics, and Christmas and Thanksgiving parties for those who have less than he does. And it's because of him that so many underprivileged children and senior citizens in the area have just a little bit more.

Sept. 1 homestead exemption cutoff

Eklerly homeowners must file a renewal form with the Cook County Assersor's Office before Sept. 1 in order to keep their homestead tax exemption, Assessor P. J. Cullerton has announced.

Last year 110,000 property owners 65 years and older qualified for the $1,500 assessment reduction under the Homestead exemption act.

Those who received the exemption last year will receive a renewal form and an addressed return envelop in the mail, Cullerton sald

The renewal form requires the homeowner to state whether he or she still owns and lives in the home, condominium co-operative, or apartment building for which the assessment reduction was originally granted. In order to keep the exemption, a property owner must sign the form and mail it to the assessor's office before Sept. 1.

Sept. 1 is also the deadline for new applications under the exemption act. To be eligible the homeowner must have reached the age of 65 by Jan. 1, 1973, and must occupy the property as his prin-

IF THE PROPERTY is in joint ownership only one of the owners must be 65 or older to qualify.

Copies of the application forms for the exemption can be obtained by telephoning Cullerton's office, 443-6151.

Local township assessors offices also have copies of the forms and have offered assistance to homeowners in filling out the applications.

A property owner must submit copies of the deed to the property, proof of age such as a Medicare card or birth certifiente, and a copy of the latest real estate tax bill on the house or apartment building to qualify for the exemption.

Answer to energy crisis in the wind?

by TOM TIEDE

AMHERST, Mass. - When artist Neil Welliver moved into a home near rural Lincolnville, Me., he was told it would cost $10,000 to string electric power lines to the site. Refusing, Welliver devised an alternative. He purchased a generator for $800 and a windmill for $2,000 and has fived happily ever after - with Ma Natur providing all the lighting his family

One nonconformist does not a trend make, of course. But as America's fossil fuel crisis grows worse, and as the search for alternative energy sources intensifies, Welliver's eccentricity may become a fad or even a movement. Wind power, after all, is not just something of quaint Dutch antiquity - it has, according to some authorities, much in the way of modern potentiality.

William Heronemus, professor of civil engineering at the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts, is the most enthusiastic authority on windpower today. Though he admits even his wife questions his theories at times, he is absolutely serious in advocating 'the might wind" a one way man can generate reliable, pollution free, almost limitless energy.

And indeed, his thesis looks good, if confusing, on paper. He estimates "the total rate of conversion between available potential energy and kinetic energy in the atmosphere of the Northern hemisphere" is to to the 14th kilowatt power. Which is a roundabout way of saying there's a hell of a lot of wind going to waste. Heronemus says the harnessing of this energy could be of enormous benefit for entire regions of the country. He believes the winds off the shores of New England, as Illustration, are enough to

Plant owners will sue to get refund on taxes

Owners of an Industrial plant in Wheeling are going to the Illinois Appellate Court with a class-action sult that seeks a partial refund of 1972 taxes paid by industrial property owners.

The suit, filed on behalf of the beneficiaries of a trust which owns the plant at 625 S. Glenn Ave., Wheeling, names Northwest suburban school districts, park districts, fire protection districts, townships and municipalities among the defendants.

The suit seeks to upset Cook County's new "fair market value" assessment system adopted in 10 of the 30 suburban townships last year.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Donald J. O'Brien ruled against the property owners in the case on May 18 when he dismissed the suit for lack of a valid complaint.

Chicago attorney Alan S. Ganz, who represents the property owners, said the case will be appealed. Ganz said a notice of appeal has been filed with the clerk of the county circuit court, but he said no immediate action on the suit by the appellate court is expected.

The suit seeks tax refunds to industrial property owners in the 10 townships affected by the new assessment system.

Cook county plans to switch to a simflar assessment system in 10 additional townships this year including Elk Grove, Maine and Schaumburg.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - General Motors Corp. has urged the government to delay implementation of 1976 federal clean-air standards for reducing oxides of nitrogen (NOX) from automobile exhausts for one year.

Ernest S. Starkman, a GM vice president in charge of environmental activities, made the request at a hearing before the Environmental Protection Agency, which heard similar pleas Monday from Ford and Chrysler along with warnings of increased fuel consumption if the generate all necessary power for the area through the year 2001.

HIS PROPOSAL, reduced to layman terms, is this: erect windmills wherever energy is needed and windpower is sufficient. He says Middle America is blustery, so is the length of the land across the northern border, and also the offshore waters. He says the generators could be floated on platforms, hung from suspension bridges, lined along roads like telephone poles, and planted in cornfields and back yards from Ypsilanti to Yahoo.

The wind would drive the blades which would power turbine generators which would give alternating current to a sea water electrolyzer station. Gaseous hydrogen - "an ideal, very clean fuel" - would be produced, then fed to a collection area for transmission to a dispersed electricity generating system. From there it would go out as electricity to a consuming world.

Ingenuous? Some say so much that it won't work. The Atlantic Richfield oil company, commenting on the idea of a TV plug for fossil fuel, wonders bemusedly: "What happens when the wind dles down?" Others say the windmill system would be prohibitively cumbersome to crect for any large scale use. Heronemus himself winces a bit when he says at least 45,000 windmills would be needed to power New England alone, a prospect that conjures up physical hazards as well as visual blight.

Yet Heronemus insists the proposal is ! viable. Not by itself, perhaps, but In combination with other energy-producing that are being considered. He says "combination is the answer"; the nation can no longer afford to rely solely on one energy source solution (nuclear power

Elizabeth Bradley

Visitation for Mrs. Elizabeth J. Bradley, of 208 S. Beau Dr., Des Plaines, who died Monday in Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, is today in Friedrichs Funeral Home, 320 W. Central Rd., Mount Prospect, from 3 to 10 p.m.

Prayers will be said at 0:30 n.m. tomorrow in the chapel of the funeral home. Then the body will be taken to St. Raymond Catholic Church, 300 S. Elmhurst Rd., Mount Prospect, where a funeral Mass will be said at 10 a.m.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth (Victor) Johnson of Mount Prospect, and two granddaughters, Elizabeth J. and Kathleen Johnson, both of Mount Prospect. She was preceded in death by her husband, John J.

BUT INTERESTING though these ideas are, they have a common defect; They are years away technically. Wind power, on the other hand, is not only possible now, it has been for centuries. Windmills were functioning in Europe in the 12th century. The gawky tripods were a major source of energy in the rural America of the 19th century. Many farmers and stuck-aways of the world still rely on this method of sucking

The process uses temperature differences between he is trying to convince the nation it ocean surfaces and ocean depths to create power. Heronemus says that 7,500 should reach into the past for its future. Thus far he's not convincing many.  Solar energy farming. The thermal energy of the sun is nearly 180,000 trillion watts. Finding ways to utilize the resource is perhaps the ultimate solution, says Heronemus. Already some houses in the nation are heated by heat-absorbing roof plates. The Skylab space station is using solar cells. Heronemus envisions solar cells in housing shingles one day.

'Country club atmosphere'

ligh schools may leave 'sloppy' cooperative

by WANDALYN RICE

Members of the High School Dist. 214 board said Monday the district may have to pull out of an eight-district data processing cooperative unless it solves major problems in its operation.

The statement come after the board heard from two former employes of the cooperative who said there is a "country club atmosphero" among staff members and Ruth Cook, said staff members of the cooperative did little work and seemed in some cases to be unable to do

In addition, Mrs. Mitchell's husband Edward, a computer consultant, said that in working with the cooperative, "I've never seen such a sloppy job in any company." He told of being called in to help a programer who could not figure program only to find one simple change was necessary to make the program

THE DATA processing cooperative is run by the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC) and provides computer service for Dist. 214 and seven elementary districts. Each district pays a portion of the budget for the cooperative with Dist. 214 paying about 60 per cent of the cost. The bill for next year's computer service for Dist. 214 is $305,000, although district officials say that is "under negotiation."

The data processing cooperative first ran into trouble last fall shortly after it purchased its computer. The Xerox Corp. replaced several defective parts in the computer but member districts complained they still were not receiving promised service.

The cooperative director, John Bernard, was asked to resign this spring and a new director, Roy Sedrel, the former computer director from Harper College, was hired earlier this month. Mitchell said he did not believe the problems in the cooperative were necessarily the fault of former director Bernard. He said Bernard had told him he could not fire certain incompetent employes because the NEC executive committee, which passes on personnel actions, would override him.

DIST, 214 board member Arthur Aronson, a member of the executive committee, said the committee had never in-wasn't bringing us problems," Aronson said, "The only thing the executive committee decided was that he (Bernard) should go." Mitchell said the new cooperative director should be given a free hand to hire and fire staff and should have 90 days to make the system work. He also recommended that the Dist. 214 board hire an outside firm to study other ways to get computer services.

"All you're getting now is payroli, accounts payable and labels," Mitchell said. "You can get that service from any service bureau at much less cost." Mrs. Cook, who worked as a secretary at the cooperative for six weeks before being fired, said she was asked to resign without warning and was told she did not fit it.

"I didn't like the country club atmosphere that was there," she said.

DIST, 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said the NEC governing board, with members from each member school district, has agreed to look for an outside consultant

The two employes, Dorothy Mitchell out what changes needed to be made in a terfered with Bernard's work. "He to study the problem, He said the study will involve looking for alternatives to the present cooperative. Board member Jack Costello said he believed the district should give the cooperative a relatively short time to solve its problems, "I've never felt one damn minute's confidence in this whole system," he said. "It's infuriating to sit here as a non-professional and know there is something wrong."

Board Pres. Gene Artemenko said he has felt for some time the cost of the data processing cooperative was too high for the amount of service received. He said the board was glad to talk to the Mitchells and Mrs. Cook and said, "We're grateful that you have the stamina and fortitude to come and tell us what you feel."

Miss Wampach named to Sacred Heart post

Judy Wampach has been appointed to the position of associate principal for academic development at Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows.

Miss Wompach replaces Louise Jacobs, who resigned her post at Sacred Heart to become principal at Mother Guerin High School in River Forest. She joins the administrative team of Gerald Giles, principal, and Jim Marx, associate principal for personal development.

At Sacred Heart of Mary High School, Miss Wampach will be responsible for scheduling, curriculum, admissions and student evaluations and records.

Miss Wampach has just received her master of arts degree in school administration from Illinois State University in Normal. She also holds a bachelor of arts degree in history from Alverno College in Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Wampach was previously a teacher and principal at Holy Ghost School in Wood Dalo and a teacher at Sacred Heart School in Lombard.

The Grand Court in Woodfield Shop- and free flight models Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. The shopping center is located at Roules 58 and 53.

Members of several model plane clubs will be there to answer questions about their planes, clubs and nearby spots where clubs hold contests.

Clubs participating include the Northwest Radio Controlled Club, Red Barons Model Airplane Club of Mount Prospect, Skylarks Radio Controlled Club of Wheeling, The Aero Angels of Chicago, Chicagoland Radio Control Modelers and the Woodland Aero Modelers.

Sexism and Little League: a summer with controversy

(First of two parts.) by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK - It all began innocently enough this spring. A 12-year-old youngster in Ypsilanti, Mich., heard about the Little League tryout in town. The youngster liked baseball and fancied that anyone could use a center fielder who could cover ground and so, with glove and dream at the ready, showed up for the tryout.

And made the team!

And then was told that she might not be able to play because girls are sup-posed to be physically inferior to boys.

And yet, says Dr. Adele Hoffman, head of the Adolescents Medical Unit in the Department of Pediatrics of New York University, "girls at the Little League age may even have a physical advantage over the boys of that age."

"From the ages of 10 to 14 we know that girls generally mature about two years faster than boys. So it would seem that girls have in fact a physical advantage at the Little League age, Their growth sport and their muscle masses increase at a greater rate.

"I think girls ought to be able to compete reasonably well. But I see it as a highly individual matter." In fact, Carolyn King, the 12-year-old Ypsilanti center fielder, is the largest player on her team.

When the International Congress of Little League, with headquarters in Wil-liamsport, Pa., got wind of Carolyn's triumph, they tried to farm her out to the Hop Scotch League, or wherever it is that girls get their exercise. Williamsport threatened to revoke Ypsilanti's charter if the young blonde darkened the

"I didn't want to tell a little girl to go away," said William Anhut, a local attorney and president of the Ypsilanti Little Little League games are played in pub-lic parks in Ypsilanti. And the City Council said there would be no discrimination by sex.

However, section I of the Little League rulebook states: "Girls are not eligible." The rule is as old as the Little League, which began in 1939.

Anhut said that the Ypsilanti league is drawing up a suit against Williamsport and plans to file it soon in Federal District Court in Detroit.

Anhut thinks he has a strong case.

The Little League is proud that it possesses a federal charter, which means that it is sanctioned by an Act of Congress. This puts it in the same league as the American Red Cross, the Boy Scouts of America and a handful more.

"No other sport is so bonored by the federal government," boasts the Little League handbook.

Anhut retorts, "If Congress knew they were disciminating against girls, they would revoke the charter."

Williamsport's case is this: baseball is unsafe for girls, especially when played

The reason that baseball "on an integrated basis" is dangerous comes from Dr. Creighton Hale, a paid vice-president and medical consultant of the Little League in Williamsport.

Based on his research, which Hale admits is very limited, "girls have slower reflexes than boys."

Apparently, though, Carolyn King's reflexes were at least as good as some of the boys she competed against.

He also said that "mis-matches" can open up negligence suits in court. "There was one case where a big girl fell on a little girl." he said. He did admit that a "mismatch" litigation might be as likely if a hig boy fell on a little boy.

Hale expressed concern that girls might be damaged for life, if, for example, a baseball hit them hard in the chest.

"I'm not impressed by that argument for keeping girls out of Little Lague," said Dr. Hoffman. "Getting hit hard in the chest could hurt boys as much as girls. And you know, some boys during early puberty have gynecomastia, a normal physiological enlargment of breast tissue, making a boy's chest very much like a girl's at that age."

CAROLYN KING, an Ypsilanti, Mich., 12-year-old, has all the tools to play centerfield but they are in the wrong package as far as Little League is concerned.

"Every human being has vulnerable parts of the anatomy. Don't all males?"

Dr. Hoffman believes that with proper protective equipment, such as helmets and vests (Little League has been experimenting with the latter for boys), risk of baseball injury is cut down.

Moreover, Dr. Hoffman is concerned about epiphyses, or "Little League shoulder," which stunts the growth of young bones because of the repetition of snapping off throws like curve balls and screwballs.

Finally, Little League says that girls are not suited for contact sports, such as basebali. One argument is whether baseball is a contact sport at all. (The Michlgan state legislature is considering it

And according to Dr. Charles Cunningham, former Syracuse University football player, not only young girls but boys between the ages of 10 and 12 are not ready for contact sports.

"Pre-tecn boys," he said, "are ana-tomically unsuited for contact sports because the growing center at the end of their long bones is not yet solid."

Route to Western Open

THE PHANTOM FIELD for Arlington "He would have given the race some Park's proposed three-on-a-match race early speed," Resseguet explained. "He Saturday was proving harder to handlcould have helped us by forcing a pace and possibly wearing Secretariat out where a strong stretch drive may have Secretariat, who could probably make heaten him. That's about the only shot better time galloping from New York, > Does that mean the extra six pounds Secretariat will be carrying (the Sec will have 126 pounds to 120 for Our Native and My Gallant) won't be a factor in the mile and one-eighth race?

> "I'd like to see 66 on him and maybe that still wouldn't make any difference," Resseguet quipped although recognizing that the 120 on Our Native would mark the first time he hasn't carried at least 124 or 126 in quite some time.

The fourth-leading trainer at Arlington need only remember back to 1969 when his Strong Strong nipped 3-to-10 favorite King Emperor in the big Arlington-Washington Futurity.

"I hope we have a day like today," Resseguet said while panning the unblemished blue overhead. "I think a lot of people - new people to racing - will come out to see this race.

"We're not hoping for any misfortune or poor racing luck. Illinois needs this race badly for its reputation. It's gotten to the point where I kate to tell my kids 'm in the horse business because of what has happened," he added frankly, referring to the black eye the industry received when the stock scandals and alleged tampering were revealed.

Since everyone had seemingly forgotten about Derby and Preakness runnerup Sham or were too afraid to invite older horses (Key To The Mint would have made it a race instead of a spectacle), Resseguet will carry the torch to give Secretariat a legitimate workout before what promises to be an overwhelming throng of patrons that may splll onto the

"If you beat Secretariat at this stage, you can name your own stud fees," Resseguet admitted, although quickly adding Reseguet, who relaxed his six-foot, that he'd refuse to retire Our Native on that basis this year. horse, has been training thoroughbreds

"You can't win 'em unless you're in 'em," he poetically concluded.

Admission gates at Arlington Park for the Arlington Invitational Saturday will open at 9 a.m. There will be only win wagering on the event and patrons will be able to make wagers on the race starting Friday at special windows in both the clubhouse and grandstand.

Tickets for reserved seats are available at Bond's Clothier's, State and Jackson, Chicago; the Arlington Park Towers; the O'Hare International Towers Hotel at the airport and in both the clubhouse and grandstand at the track beginning today.

There will be no increase in prices for Arlington Invitational Day," President and Chief Executive Officer John F. Loome said. "Prices for reserved box scats as well as clubhouse and grandstand will remain at the regular $2 price."

The Invitational will be the seventh race of a 10-race program Saturday with headliner slated for 5:18 p.m. Post time for the first race has been moved up to 1 The Match Race will be carried live by

Wheeling explodes again; Hersey, Prospect triumph in summer league

Backed by a 14-hit attack, pitcher Willle Korel fired a two-hitter at Elk Grove Monday for an easy 13-0 Wheeling win in high school summer league play. Kozel, who fanned 10 and allowed just three walks, only had trouble with Scott Scholten. The Grenadiers' only big stick In the lineup had a double and a single. However, the Grove team was lacking some of its top regulars. Wheeling slapped starter and loser

Steve Sheridan in the first inning as Coach Ron DeBolt's team scored five times. The 'Cats proceeded to also score in every inning after that. Carl Pfister slammed a solo home run in the third and Ken Morgalski had a leadoff double in the fifth. Posting two hits each were John Carlberg, Paul Groot and Howie Brauer. The latter trio also accounted for seven runs batted in, three of them by Carlberg. It was the second time that Wheeling has scored 13 runs. The least the 'Cats have scored was six. They improved their record to 7-0. SCORE BY INNINGS

HERSEY COASTS Hersey never was in trouble as Gary Gustafson acattered seven hits en route to a 6-2 triumph over Addison Trail Mon-

The only runners who scored for Addison Trail barely beat throws to the plate that would have nailed them. Hersey coach Harvey Foster said Gustafson "looked real good" in his first start.

The Huskies scored all the runs they needed in the first laning when Tom Vetta singled and walks to Tom Good and Paul Cartes filled the bases, Jim Lococo then came through with an RBI single and Dave Mnichowicz' double drove in two more.

In the second, Vetta again singled, went to third on Mark Krause's base hit and came home on a balk.

Don Blanchi walked and scored on Pat Hart's third inning triple to make it 5-1

The Huskies scored their final run in the fourth when Vetta walked, stole second, was sacrificed to third and scored on an errant pickoff attempt. Gustafson struck out four and walked two to lead the Huskies to the victory. Over the weekend, Hersey beat Peru, Ill., 7-3 Friday night and then defeated the same Peru club again 12-5 Saturday afternoon. A scheduled Saturday night game with LaSalle was washed out in the third inning when a thunderstorm suddenly broke.

the strong righthander yielded just five hlts, walking only one and fanning an even dozen while contributing two hits to Prospect's attack. Dundee broke on top with a run in the third on a single, stolen base and a twoout double, but the Knights gave Kelley all the support he needed in a decisive three-run fourth. Randy Clark, Mike Quade and Ed

Kranse all drew passes while Mike Lapcewich greeted a Dundee reliever with a two-run single and Tom Garms capped the uprising with a run-producing single.

Prospect, which stands at 6-1 in the Northwest Division, put the game out of reach in a two-run sixth as a pair of Dundee misplays, another RBI single by Garms and a delayed double steal of home by Krause sparked the rally.

Barrington rallied for the tie-breaking run in the bottom of the seventh and handed Forest View a heart-breaking 5-4 defeat in third-week play in the summer league program. The Bronchos, who have lost only once this summer, combined a leadoff triple and a single in the hole between short and third of Forest View's pulled-in infield for the decisive marker.

The Falcons gave Barrington a quick 1-0 edge after one inning as a Broncho single, stolen base, infield out and wild pitch produced the game's initial tally.

Cubs' Beckert to appear at Schaumburg State Bank

Glenn Beckert, All-Star second baseman of the Chicago Cubs, will be at Schaumburg State Bank Friday, June 29, from 6 to 8 p m.

Not only will everyone be able to meet and talk with Gleon, but he will be autographing free baseballs for the first 500 people appearing at the bank.

Known to his fellow ballplayers as the "Pro's . . . Pro," Beckert has been constantly in the limelight. For four consecutive years he was toughest to strike out in the league.

In 1968 Glenn was presented with the "Golden Glove Award" as the top fielding second baseman in the National League and was named "Chicago Player of the Year" by the Chlcago Baseball 1971 brought additional fame to Beckert who turned in the highest season batting average of his career and was named to "The Sporting News" National League All-Star Team and the Associated Press Major League All-Star team.

Local golfer places second in NIMAGA play

Richard Evans, 19, of Barrington Park in Barrington, carded a 73 to place second in last week's Northern Illinois Men's Amateur Golf Association championships at Chevy Chase Country Club.

Evans then played in the Western Open pre-qualifying rounds held at Rolling Green Country Club, missing the cutoff point of 74 by a single stroke. The Western Open will begin Thursday at Chicago's Midiothian Country Club.

Evans is on a golf scholarship at the University of Tucson (Ariz.). He plays out of Inverness Country Club.

But Forest View captured a 3-1 margin in the fourth on Thom Culkar's leadoff single, a walk to Bill Simon, an error and batting star Neil Schmidt's two-run double.

Barrington matched the trio of runs in the fifth on a pair of doubles and a tworun homer, but Schmidt was back in the spotlight for Forest View in the sixth when his solo homer tled the game at 4-4. Barrington, however, pushed the goahead tally across in the last of the seventh off Falcon starter Keith Mallian who pitched well in defeat. SCORE BY INNINGS

A four-run Crystal Lake third inning was the crusher for Schaumburg Monday evening as the Saxons dropped a Summer League engagement, 6-4. Gary Merchant went the distance for striking out eight. He was getting ahead of the hitters, but they were delivering with two strikes. Schaumburg scored a single run in the first on a single by Gary Frontier, stolen base, and single by Doug Olson and Schaumburg, allowing eight singles and added two more in the second with four hits by Merchant, Ray Fairbanks, Joe Hannon, and Ron Cuchnia. That gave the Saxons a short-lived 3-2 lead, but Crystal Lake slammed out three straight hits in the third and went on to score four runs. In the fifth the final Saxon run came across without the aid of a base hit. Frontier reached on an error and a stolen base, another error, and sacrifice fly

EVEN IF the fishing hasn't been consistently perfect for the "grown ups" there are a few hundred kids who are having the time of their lives fishing Salt Creek. And they're catching a lot of fish.

A trie of 13-year-okis from Grove Jr. High School in Elk Grove are among the more successful anglers of Salt Creck. The boys, Tom Steinbuck, Mark Sumsky and Bill Ityan, are spending most of their so-far summer vacation fishing.

According to Mrs. Mariene Steinbuck, the alarm goes off at 5:00 a.m., which is the signal for a quick breakfast and off to the creek. Last week the boys telephoned the news of catching a 23-inch, 9 pound carp. Monday morning they landed a 23-inch albino cat(ish!

It didn't take long for word to get around and the result is that the fishing pressure on Salt Creek's bullhead, catfish and carp population has approximately augdrupled.

The fish, incidentally, are not going to waste, although there would be certain Justification for discarding a carp or a bullhead. That is, unless your mother is Marlene Steinbuck, a former southern Illineis girl who knows about frying catfish and smoking carp. . . or if your father is Tom Steinbuck, who annually fishes Canada and regularly fishes Lake Michigan and does it all parily because he simply likes to cat fish.

Reported Mariene Steinbuck: "We smoked the carp in our backyard smoker, and it was delicious." She mentioned earlier efforts at stuffing and baking carp, but admitted that smoking was a far better process. "And fried carp is just no good," she warned.

The boys daily land a stringer of yellow builheads, which not everyone knows is also good eating, and which, like the carp are duly prepared and eaten by members of the three familles.

"But I'm not quite sure about what to do with that albino catfish," Mrs. Steinbuck confessed. Reminded that this is probably the same strain of cotfish that Florida residents were continually seeing walking across state highways and that were originally intended as aquarium species, her hesitance grew. At this writing, the albino catfish is still alive and well and swimming quietly in the family garbage can.

Perhaps a Salt Creek Fishing Contest is in order...

WISCONSIN FISHING is going from good to excellent with a couple of big fish making news over the weekend. A 25pound chinook was taken just out of Kenosha harbor on Sunday and a 32 pound musky was caught in Minocqua lake in Oneida county. The musky was a 37-inch hybrid and was caught on a live sucker.

The musky action is getting better every day, particularly in the Vilas county lakes. Ballard, Partridge and Allequash are all giving up legal muskles - most of them hitting suckers. A 50-inch 31 pound musky came out of Plum lake last week, falling to a purple Mepps spinner.

Blg Arbor Vitae Lake, in the same area, is producing some executent walleye stringers and the boss fishing isn't had either. A 612-pound largemouth came out of little Lake and a 2032-inch 5-pound largemouth was taken from flonch Lake. For the bass the surface halls are searing most consistently - or weedless hooks with minnows or frogs, Lake Michigan fishing is fair to good from Wnukegan north. And the further north you get, the better the lake trout fishing gets. Near Two Rivers and Manllowoc, anglers are catching lake trout and king salmon in a mere 50 feet of water about 25 feet down. Best lures are the flutter spoons, wobblers, scalelite flies and rattle spoons.

Trout fishing is excellent in many of the streams around Antigo. Lake trout are biting off Sturgeon Bay in Door County near the surface at depths of 12 to 140 feet with the largest fish coming out of the north mouth of the bay, Some big perch were also taken in Door County at Big Creek and Strawberry Creek. Brook trout fishing is pretty good at Whitellsh Bay and Sister Bay.

While bass fishing in Lake Winnebago is excellent along the west shore and walleyo fishing on the reefs is good to very good. Good entenes of lake trout are coming out of Big Green Lake and northern pike fishing is excellent on Lake Puckaway in the same area. Panfish action is good on all the central and southern Wisconsin lakes.

In southern Wisconsin largemouth bass fishing is good on all the waters you can get on, with very good catches coming out of Golden, Pewnukee and Engle Spring lakes in Wankesha county, Some northern pike activity was reported on Big Crdar Lake and Wind Lake, and walleye fishing is going from good to excellent on Lake Geneva, Wind Lake, and in the Fox Alver of Waterford.

Good catches of perch are being taken in Lake Mendota on dragon fly nymphs and worms and some trout are being caught on files in many of the trout streams in the Madison area. On Lake Wisconsin and in the Wisconsin river the walleye action is picking up some and will get better as the waters continue to

Larry Peifer sixth

Local golfer Larry Pelfer placed sixth In the funler flight of the NIMAGA Open last Friday when he covered the Chevy Chase Country Club courso in just 76 recede and clear up.

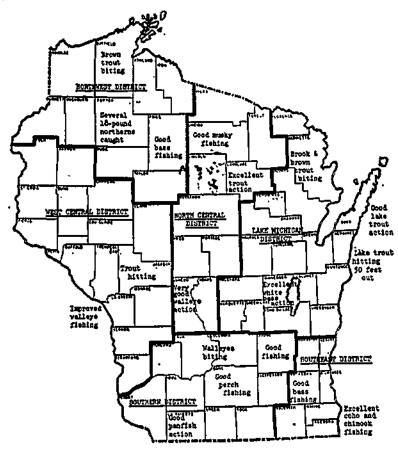

But now the not-so-good news: The mosquito action, as usual, is very heavy on practically all of the waters - so take along plenty of repellent to be sure you enjoy the trip.

Wisconsin authorities have also issued a hazardous fire condition warning for most of the state, urging extreme caution on the part of fishermen, campers and backpackers.

In spite of the many rains and winds, the early disappearance of the snow cover made the forests and wooded areas deceptively vulnerable.

One official, in pleading for extra care by the public, said that this is the worst year since 1968. Since the first of the year, over 400 fires have depleted several thousand acres of timber.

He added that "many people don't realize that even after a rain, ground vegetation in early spring tends to shed water and dry rapidly restoring the conditions which are conductve to the rapid, uncontrollable spread of fire."

Wisconsin fishing report | Mount Prospect sweeps shutouts

"If they never score, you will never seven-hit assault. lose" is an old, old adage that gained resurgence Sunday from the mound staff of Mount Prospect's Ninth District Leglon team.

Rick Haaning and Larry Monroe took turns silencing non-conference foe Mundelein as the Prospectors completed an amazing doubleheader sweep, 3-0 and Pitching was so dominant in the twogame set that Mundelein managed just three hits for the entire afternoon - two in the first game and just one off Monroe in the nightcap.

In an opening game, distance performance, Hanning was in complete command, yielding singles in the first and sixth frames, walking no one and whilfing 10. The blg lefty could have knocked down 15 Mundelein "hitters" in a row had not an error interrupted the dazzling

This year why don't you celebrate the Fourth of July by watching the famed Circus Parada in Milwaukee? It's one of the year's great events and you can see it in comfort, with no traffic to contend with, on a July Fourth Family Plan at the Milwaukee/Marriott Inn. Just $24.95 for a defuxe double room and transportation to and from the Parada. Up to six in a room at that price, or a nominal extra charge for cots. Check in enytime after noon on July 3 and stay until 7 p.m. on July 4. The special holiday plan makes meals box lunch, the Circus Breakfast Buffet. Extras for the kids include an Indoor swimming pool, a game room, free movies, a make-it-yourself ice creem parlor and organized games. Just take the Tri-State Tallway (1.94) a shart distance west from Milwaukee right to the door. For reservations call 414/786-1100 or Toll Free, 800/228-9290

ABC-TV king of the vacation-season hill

HOLLYWOOD - In terms of first-run summer entertainment series, ABC-TV is king of network television's vacationtime season this year.

Skeptles at the other networks may try to brush off this fact, noting that video audiences are smaller in the vacation months, but many persons who do watch television in the summer will appreciate ABC-TV's efforts. Regardless of the ratlngs, these efforts will result in a goodwill victory with the public for ABC-TV, the smallest of the "big three" commercial video networks.

CBS-TV thus far has no first-run summer entertainment series on the air, blaming the four-month writers' strike. NBC-TV at least has several new weekly musical-variety shows on tape - a Helen Reddy Series that begins Thursday and a group of country music programs, taped in Nashville, that take over Dean Martin's usual time slot for a brief run starting July 26.

ABC-TV. MEANWHILE, already has two first-run summer series on the air and two more set to bow in. These four shows are:

• "Thicker Than Water," a situation comedy that arrived June 13 with Julie Harris, Richard Long and Malcolm Atterbury as its regular stars, and concerns a long-estranged sister and brother who must run their ailing old father's factory to earn their promised inher-

· "Love Thy Neighbor," a situation comedy that had its debut June 15 and deals with a white couple and a black couple whose houses are next to each

• "The Burns and Schreiber Comedy Hour," a variety entry that offers the witty team on Saturday nights starting this coming weekend. A preview of this series last Friday achieved an admirable level of original, quality humor.

· "The Corner Bar," a situation comedy, first seen on ABC-TV last summer, that returns Aug. 3 and revolves around the goings-on at a neighborhood New York City tavern, This series showed some real potential and laugh-getting ability in its 1972 run.

IN ADDITION to these four entries, ABC-TV recently presented — as another "off-season" attraction — the mini-series "The Strauss Family," a schmoltzy but entertaining dramatized biography with music about the famous Viennese clan of waltz composers.

ABC-TV also is detailing plans for some of its major specials of the 1973-74 season — for example, for its scheduled two-hour program "F. Scott Fitzgerald and 'The Last of the Belles'," which dramatizes two periods of the writer's life one through a short story he wrote. The network says Richard Chamberlain will star as Fitzgerald and Blythe Danner as his wife, Zelda, and, in explaining the structure of the program, says:

"Fitzgerald wrote the short story 'The Last of the Belles' in 1928. It fictionalized his meeting with Zelda while he was an Army officer in the south, F. Scott Fitzgerald and 'The Last of the Belles' first portrays the author with is wife and child at the time in their lives when he was about to write this story. The program then slips into 1919, the time depicted in the short story about a young officer stationed in Georgia."

The network says that "featured in the fiction segment of the special are David Huffman and Susan Sarandon, who represent the young Fitzgerald and the last of the southern belles."

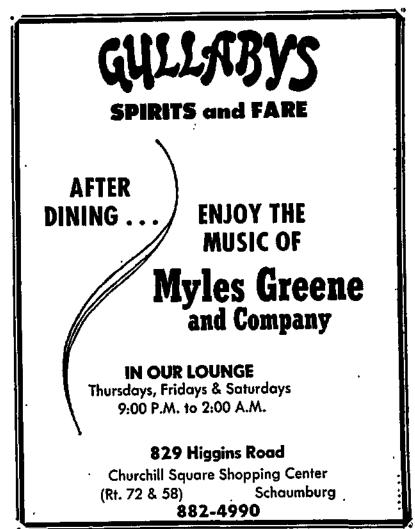

OTHER 1973-74 specials in the works at ABC-TV:

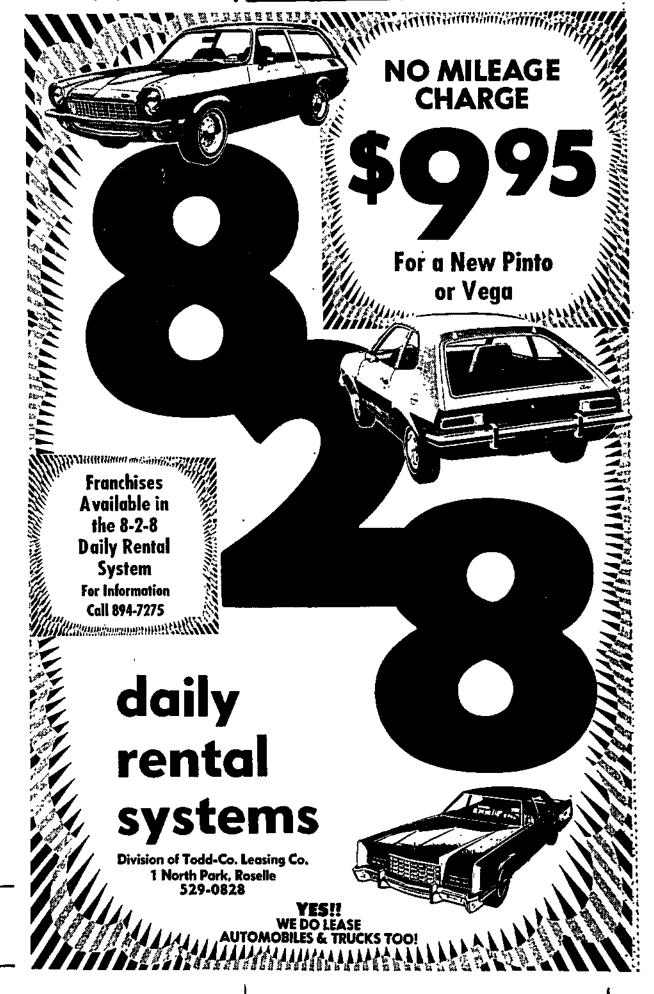

· A new two hour production of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie," starring Katharine Hepburn.

· An hour headlining the new music and comedy star Bette Midler.

 A two-part, four-hour presentation, "The Movies," which ABC-TV says includes "famous scenes" from more than 100 movies, and is scheduled for this fall, with proceeds from the special benefiting the Motion Picture and Television Relief Fund.

Bear Dr. Lamb -I was interested in your column about boils, and it reminded me of my case. I'm 75 now. About 55 years ago I used to get large boils on my hands and arms. The doctor was a member of the club I still belong to and made a serum from the pus in my boils. He gave me three or four injections of the serum. I don't recollect how many days apart, but the boils disappeared forever. I wonder why the same remedy can't be applied today.

Bear Render - Your letter touches on an interesting facet of medical history. The direction of medicine, like most othor areas of science, follows the course of events. Fifty-five years ago we didn't have antibiotics, and before the days of antibiotics great efforts were made toward developing "stock vaccines." These were made pretty much as you describe them. It was a natural outgrowth of developing a smallpox vaccine from cow pox, and the whole idea was to cause the body to develop an immunity to different infectious agents. With the development of antibiotics and their remarkable of retiveness, ork in this orea was minimized, compared to what might have resulted. The usual approach is to use antibiotics instead of worrying about the possibility of using a "stock vaccine."

Possibly without antibiotics there would have been many more vaccines developed, which in turn might have produced better results in preventing diseases, immediately the dream of many investigators of venereal disease comes to mind - the thought of having a vaccine that would immunize a person against having the various venereal diseases. If a person could be successfully vaccinated against the possibility of developing gonorrhea or syphilis, and perhaps other venercal diseases, it would certainly be a great boon to mankind. This is not a new or original idea, and there has been considerable work done on it, and no doubt someday this will be accomplished.

by Lawrence E, Lamb, M.D.

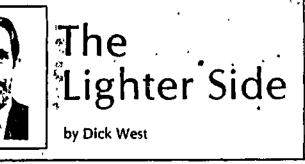

Dear Dr. Lamb - I am 51 years old, and because of stomach, heart, and liver trouble, along with the tendency toward diabetes, I quit all alcoholic beverages completely. I also quit smoking eight

My doctor told me coffee was also bad, so I cut down to two cups a day. When I told him I was drinking tea he said tea was almost as bad as coffee.

I am not yet in a wheelchair by any means, but I would like to live as long as possible. Without generalizations, Dr. Lamb, could you tell me, on a scale of ten, the relative danger there is to a percon with my medical problems of drinking tea versus coffee.

Dear Reader - It depends on how it's made. Your doctor's comment is based on the fact that both tea and coffee contain caffeine and related drugs. As ordinarily brewed, a cup of coffee contains about twice as much caffeine as does a cup of tea. This has to be a generalization because some people drink weak ten and others drink strong coffee. But, that's your ballpark figure to guide you. You might consider trying decassednated coffee. In the interest of keeping your weight under control and limiting your fat and sweet intake, if you were going to use very much of it, it might be a good idea to use it without sugar or cream or cream substitutes.

WASHINGTON - French newspapers have practically been making an international incident out of the fact that the White House served a Cobernet wine with beef at President Nixon's dinner for Russia's Leonld Brezhnev.

backstairs personnel "whose zeal exceeded their judgment." THERE IS NO basis for rumors that top White House aides approved the selection and that the President himself may have been aware of II, this source averred.

Assuming that information is accurate, one blg question arises - Why? Why risk offerding the French by serving a clarettype Cabernet Sauvignon with beef bordelaise when a Burgundy-type Pinot Norwas available?

That question undoubtedly will send investigators scurrying to the records to see whether any Cabernet Sauvignon vintners were among the major contributors to Nivon's 1972 campaign.

it is my own feeling that anti-Nixon elements in the French press seized upon the incident in an attempt to undermine the Seviet-American detente.

WE ALL KNOW that West European countries fear their influence in world affairs will diminish as the United States develops closer ties with China and the Soviet Union. Now suppose that Brezhnev became convinced that Nixon had served him an inappropriate wine. That surely would be a major setback in the effort to improve relations between the two countries. At the same time, it would enhance the prestige of France - making it appear that French advice on wine selection is Indispensable to the conduct of American foreign policy.

In sum, the wine flap may be a case of

At birth, Joe was the "monster" many first-time mothers have nightmares about before delivery. He was born with four legs and four arms.

Thus began the rare set of circumstances involving the infant Joe and his parents, Mike and Joan, all fictitious names in a case history published Wednesday. The parents, now 22, insisted on anonymity to keep anything from shadowing their child's life.

Joe is now a nearly normal 10-monthold boy with bright brown eyes, fluffy blonde hair and four new teeth which glisten as he chortles during a game of patty-cake with his father. His extra limbs were removed by surgery.

JOE'S CONDITION at birth was only the 23rd such case ever documented in nearly three centuries - a condition called dipygus. And possibly more unusual, there was a surgeon only a few miles away at the end of a red, "hot-line" telephone with the experience to correct the

Dr. Marc Rowe, chief of pediatric surgery at the University of Miami's School of Medicine, had been on the staff of the Wyeth Children's Hospital of the University of Chicago in 1966 and helped correct the malformation of another such infant. That child, nicknamed "Cindy," was born with four legs, two bladders, two rectums, two sets of reproductive organs and three kidneys.

Dr. Rowe said his first reaction when he received the call from a sheriff's hellcopter was to rush little Joe to Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital from the county where he was born.

JOE WAS ONLY several hours old when the 5½ hour operation began. The THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT CONSERVING ELECTRICITY.

Forgotten filters can cost you money.

Since filters are usually out of sight, they're usually out of mind. That is, until you notice something wrong with your heating or air conditioning. Then you may find a dirty filter behind it. Dust or lint on filters reduces your system's ability to move heated or cooled air.

It's a good idea to check your filters every 30-60 days. To remind yourself, you may want to do it the same day you pay your fuel bill. If the filter is dirty, clean or replace it. Clean filters also help keep your home cleaner. This principle applies essentially to all heating fuels-electricity, gas or oil.

Don't forget the filter on your clothes dryer either. Clean it after every load to keep your dryer in top operating condition. Maintaining clean filters is only in love with his three aces and eventually pushed to six diamonds.

He covered West's Jack of clubs with dummy's queen. If West had led from the king everything would be fine, but when East produced the king, at first glance South saw no way to make 12

There is no bonus for giving up, so South thought a while, He asked himself, "If there any combination of East-West cards that will allow me to make my slam?" Finally he worked one out. Trumps would have to break 2.2 and hearts 4-3.

That wasn't too much to ask, but there was a little problem of finding enough entries to dummy so that he could get two club discards without having to play more than two rounds of trumps.

South took his ace of clubs; led a heart to dummy's king; ruffed a heart with his 10 of trumps; led a low trump and finessed dummy's nine. Thus apparently unnecessary finesse was taken to give himself an extra quick entry to dummy.

South ruffed another heart. Both opponents followed and business was good. A trump to dummy's king brought down the last too enemy trumps.

Now South disearded his two clubs on the ace and six of hearts; conceded a spade trick and racked up the slam.

Story of Post's decision to publish

BY IRA BERKOW

Third in a series.

WASHINGTON - Publisher Katharine Graham walked into her large, cleanlined but couchy office at The Washington Post. She hold a single long-stemmed rose. She had just been to the newsroom, three floors down on the flith floor, where she is referred to as "The Dame," as in, "She's a good dame to work for."

The television set in her office had been on and was sort of off-color. On the screen, James McCord was testifying before the Senate Watergate committee. McCord's face was nearly as deep-red on this TV set as Mrs. Graham's rose.

It was a fitting coincidence. For it was the 56-year-old Mrs. Graham, or rather her newspaper, or her reporters - actually, all three - who greatly were responsible for James McCord being now in such an embarrassing predicament.

"It gets deeper and deeper, uglier and uglier, doesn't it?" she said, nodding toward McCord.

She has followed the case closely through its dark and labyrinthian rooks and pestholes. It was The Washington Post, virtually alone among the nation's media, which initially pursued the Watergate story.

IT BEGAN ON June 17, 1972, when five men were enught breaking into the Democratic National Committee headquarters. Post managing editor Howard Simon called Mrs. Graham at home and said, "You will not believe what is going Although Mrs. Graham has not been directly involved in the decision-making of the investigations, her influence is omnipresent. She could have squashed it at any time. But then, she says, she could not have.

"I don't mean to be corny or coy," she said, "but there was nothing really herole about the whole thing. I mean, my only decision was whether to back my editorial staff and my reporters, Well, I have great faith in their judgment and ability. I knew we had to go ahoad with the story. That's really what our business is all about.

"Heroism is when you have a choice, As the story unfokied I knew we were on sound ground. You can't shut your eyes to it. Besides, we had the full backing of the corporate group. They lelt as I do that excellence on the news side and profits go hand-in-hand. It was that simple. But, well, sure, I had steepless

THIS IS WHY:

Perhaps never in history has one newspaper been so feroclously attacked by an administration as was The Washington Post in the last year.

Charges of iles, shabby and irresponalbie lournalism and routine character assassinations were commonplace by the Nixonians. The newspaper's credibility was in jeopardy. ("And that's all a newspaper has really, is its credibility," said Mrs. Graham.)

Sen. Hobert Dole, R-Kan., said in a peech last fall that the only reason the Post was so insistent upon linking the Watergate break-in to the White House was that Mrs. Graham "hated Nixon."

When she happened to run into Dole at a Washington party, she asked him about that statement. "Oh, you know how those things are," he told her. "They put something in your hands and you read it." She grimaced now, as she recalled it, and said, "No matter how outrageous someone's remarks might be proved, some of that drlp, drlp, drlp, sticks."

STOCK OF The Washington Post Company (which includes Newsweek magu-zine as well as two Florida television stations and other media holdings) had reached an all-time high on Dec. 29, 1972, but soon plummeted from $38 a share to 23 and one-half.

Some might have made a connection between the fall in price and the fact that the administration was challenging the renewal of the licenses of the two Post TV stations. The uncertain credibility status of the Post at the time may also have been a factor in the stock drop. However, it is true that the stock market In general had been in a down period.

"We had to be concerned about whether we were being used by Democrats, or even the Republicans who wanted to discredit us. We asked ourselves if there was some enormous Kafka plot," said Mrs. Graham. She added that this was the most difficult period for the paper, even tougher than when the Post printed the Pentagon Papers, after the New York Times had been forced to desist publishing by court order.

THE PAPER CONTINUED to root out the apparent political esplonage and the cynical attempts at obstructing justice by the administration, despite the disbellef, skepticism and lack of help by much of the nation's media.

"It was fantastic to think about," said Mrs. Graham. "And all of us were asking, why was this happening when obviously the campaign was so unbalanced against McGovern." She said no one wanted to believe that Nixon's re-election committee would have been so corrupt under those circumstances.

As for the Post being alone for so long in reporting the Walergate case, Mrs. Graham said, "Not many in Washington are equipped to do this kind of police reporting. It's pretty grungy work and so few have the manpower, And when it be-gan coming to light, we had the sources and it was hard for the others to catch

Mrs. Graham encouraged the reportorial digging, and the accuracy of facts. in two ways. First, as Bradlee says, there has been created "an overpowering atmosphere of professionalism" at the paper. So all facts were checked two and three times. Secondly, there was the personal sense of outrage Mrs. Graham felt toward the apparent criminal acts of the administration.

"People thought it was all right to do wrong things for a cause," said Mrs. Graham. "The atmosphere of the administration was one of helping to corrupt the judicial process - the structure of the nation."

Needless to say, Mrs. Graham derived satisfaction - not to mention a kind of peace of mind - when the Post proved right and the administration wrong. In effect, it meant that she and the Post were also correct in this case about the integrity and responsibility of American journalism.

THE EXPOSURE OF the Watergate scandal, which probably could not have been accomplished unless sources knew their identities would be kept confidential by reporters, illustrates a point which Mrs. Graham believes is essential for the public to understand. That is, the role of newspapers as a watchdog for the public cannot be accomplished fully without the freedom of reporters to keep sources confidential. In recent years, however, the courts in a few instances have falled reporters for not revealing sources.

Mrs. Graham says she does not like to be interviewed. "The press," she said, 'should be the chorus in the play, not the characters." Yet it is undeniable that The Post is a character in this sordid melodrama called Watergate. And for a long time, it had been the only sleuth in

Headstart gets office in Arlington

Temporary administrative offices for Project Headstart have been set up at the Northwest Mental Health Center, 1711 Campbell St., Arlington Heights.

The temporary facilities were established last week after a fire June 15 destroyed the Headstart offices at the Pioneer Park fieldhouse in Arlington Helghts.

Headstart officials have permission to stay at the Northwest Mental Health Center until September but are hoping to find a permanent location before then, according to Ann Anderson, Headstart director. The Northwest Human Resources Development Center in Rolling Meadows is considering a request from Hendstart officials for office space. A request for office space has also been made to the Community Church of Rolling Meadows.

"It's a runaround for people trying to contact us. It has put us behind in our recrultment," said Miss Anderson, Headstart officials can now be reached at 392-

The fire destroyed most records and files kept by Hendstart for the past several years and most of the office equipment. People with office materials to donate should contact the temporary Headstart office. Miss Anderson sold she would be going through the fieldhouse office today in an attempt to salvage as many records as possible. Content Insurance in the amount $3,741 was carried on the office and the full amount is expected to be collected, according to Miss Anderson. The building was insured by the Arlington Heights Park District.

Despite the disruption caused by the fire, there has been no curtailment of Headstart programs. Project Headstart covers more than 240 square miles in Northwest Cook County and has four Headstart centers located in Prospect Heights, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Palatine. Headstart is a federally funded preschool program for children from low income families.

Lack of interest may force end to Roundtable sessions

by RICH HONACK

The President's Roundtable sessions in Buffalo Grove are looking for something to keep them from going down for the third time and drowning completely.

Village Pres. Gary Armstrong, originator of the sessions for village leaders, said Monday night the time may have come to forget about such sessions because of lack of interest.

"TWO YEARS AGO we initiated this ldea for the board to come and listen to the leadership of the community. I think we have missed that mark," said Armstrong, speaking at the fifth such session.

Armstrong then asked the sparse crowd, "Should we continue? If you take the trustees, reporters and plan commission members out of this room you'll end up with no one left. Quite frankly, I am disappointed that we have not done what we had in mind."

Almost 00 invitations were sent to leaders of community organizations, but only nine groups were represented. Of the nine, however, all urged Armstrong not to suspend the idea of the sessions. They suggested that the village work to find a way to get the organizations to the meet-

The leaders said they felt three of the five meetings were successful since the Chamber of Commerce, Blood program and proposed Community Centor were all results of roundtable sessions. They said they would like to try one more time to get the organizations involved.

ONE OF THE biggest problems facing the leaders of roundtable sessions is that many of the organizations involved cover more than just Buffalo Grove. There are several organizations that include Buffalo Grove, Arlington Heights, Long Grove and Wheeling.

With this type of setup many of the organization's leaders live in the surrounding communities. Therefore, they have no real interest in Buffalo Grove and feel it is not necessary to show up for the meetings.

To solve this problem, Armstrong plans to try to find a leader for the roundtable sessions. The suggestion made at Monday's meeting was for former village official to possibly take the Job. Armstrong sald yesterday he hoped to have some lden as to who that person would be by

THE GROUP PRESENT at Monday's meeting decided it would be the job of this person to keep the address list up to date and try to form a committee to call the leaders of organizations rather than just sending them a letter.

Village Trustee Jerry Driscoll sald, Many times you can get a lot more out of a phone call or a knock on the door. Its harder to say "no" when you are in direct contact with a person."

Another suggestion made was If a person in charge of an organization is not from Buffalo Grove, the highest ranking village resident in that group should be asked to attend the roundtable session.

The group also agreed that the best time for the meetings to be convened would be on all the fifth Mondays of the

Finally, the group said they would like to have every organization on the list give a presentation of its activities, scheduling different groups for different

Police chief still wants to limit trick-or-treat

Although Halloween is more than four loween activities. months away, the hollday is already occupying the attention of Buffalo Grove

Several weeks ago the village board considered an ordinance that would have restricted Halloween trick or treating to Oct. 31, before 8 p.m. The proposed ordinance would have fined violators be-

The board rejected the idea of an ordinance on the grounds that it was not flexible enough. Board members expressed concern that the proposed ordinance might have restricted some children from trick or treating because of religlous conflicts and might be difficult to enforce because of Halloween parties.

Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry Waish, who suggested the original ordinance, sald yesterday the main intent of the proposal was to protect village chil-

Walsh said that although he was aware of the sentiment and enthusiasm attached to Halloween, it took a "hard sec-ond place to safety." He stressed the dangers involved in having young children darting around village streets after dark on the fall holiday.

-Suburban Living Walsh also was concerned that the good nature of people is sometimes taxed

He sald he is still in favor of an ordinance, but because of the board's resistance he and Village Man. Dan Larson are working on a more flexible resolution or proclamation to present to the board.

ACCORDING TO Larson, the resolution would take the form of suggested guidelines for trick or treating, urging licitation to the daylight hours.

Larson said that he expected to present the resolution to the board in August or September, so people will not forget it by Halloween. If the resolution is passed, the officials would then publicize it by placing posters in schools and other public places in the village, he said.

Elk Grove is the only village regulating trick or treating, he said. Wheeling does not have an ordinance but does have a set of guidelines such as Buffalo Grove is considering.

Walsh said that the village has never had any real trouble with people distributing harmful candy to children on Halloween. "We did have reason to believe that something was tampered with last year but it wasn't definite," he said.

The ordinance was not intended to protect children from this type of thing, however, "because if people want to hurt children they'll hurt them whether it's by the older kids who can abuse the Halduring daylight hours or not," he said.

Homeowner wants park, not buildings

by JILL BETTNER

A Mill Creek homeowner is making a last ditch effort to gain more park land before Miller Builders begins construction of the last phase of the subdivision, but it may be too late.

The developer applied Monday for building permits for 12 more apartment buildings.

James Wylle, 723 Carriage Way Dr., sent letters this week to Mill Creek residents urging them to reconsider Miller's offer of a 3.5-acre park site in Phase II of the project.

In return for the park, Miller proposed changing his plans for the Phase II apartments to construct instead condominiums and 1.97-acre commercial area at the north end of the development.

RESIDENTS VOTED last week to let Miller complete his original plan, settling for a 5.5-acre park adjacent to Washington Irving School, which is under construction.

Wylle feels the vote of 25 out of 300 families in Mill Creek does not accurately reflect the concern of the residents. Of the 300 families, 80 belong to the Mili Creek Homeowners Association which conducted the poll.

"People were just apathetic and didn't come to the meeting to express their true opinion," Wylie said yesterday. "I talked to people all up and down my block who said they were horrified at the way the vote came out."

Wylle included postcards in his letters for residents to indicate whether or not they feel the village board should accept Miller's park offer. The postcards are to be mailed to Village Trustee Ed Osmon. OSMON COULD NOT be reached for comment yesterday, but Wylic said he hoped the village board member could influence the other trustees to delay construction on Phase II by holding up Miller's building permits.

Bill Detner, Buffalo Grove chief building inspector, said yesterday there is no legal way to hold up the building per-

"They (Miller) came in Mond. and applied for the permits," he said, "They are scheduled to go before the appearance commission July 12 and probably by July 23, they'll have the village board's approval. They could start building the next day," he added.

DETTMER said the only way residents could possibly delay construction of the apartments would be to seek a court injunction against Miller.

"They've (Miller) passed all the re-quirements and their plans are perfect," Dettmer said. "There's nothing I can Park Board Pres. Gene Muryn said yesterday he received a copy of Wylle's fetter in the mail Monday, but he did not have a chance to talk to either Wylie or

Mail engagement leads to bush villages of the Congo

by MARY HOULINAN

When Jean Wolford looks out of her kitchen window, she sees bush villagers of Zaire, formerly the Belgian Congo in Africa, carrying water buckets and farming small gardens.

She probably finds it hard to believe that a three-year engagement by mail to a Midwest minister could ever have taken her that far,

When Jean first began dating the now-Rev. Marvin Wolford in high school in her home town of Abingdon, Ill., her only thoughts were of settling down on a form and having a few children.

BUT TODAY, Jean Wolford, married to the Rev. Wolford almost 16 years, expects surprise as a natural element in her life. She has lived in Zaire through two nationalistic uprisings, one in 1960, the other in 1968, and somehow she's managed to continue to look like a typical minister's wife.

Mrs. Wolford and her husband were in Mount Prospect last weekend for a visit during a missionary furlough from the Congo. Most of the weekend was spent telling members from Trinity United and South Community-Baptist churches (fout their lives in Zoire, and their needs in the church community in which they We're quite fortunate. We have a Methodist hospital where we live, and electric lights," said the Rev. Wolford.

'Our main job now is translating the Bible," he said. Under the Wolfords' direction the Bible has been translated into two languages and covers the local dialects spoken by more than 10 tribes in the area in which he lives. More recently, the books of Genesis and Exodus, as well as commentary on the Old Testament have been translated and

ALONG WITH HIS many other activi-ties, Wolford is also a local district superintendent of the local village Methodist Church.

fils story of how he traveled from Abingdon to Zaire is interesting as well as surprising. Wolford, who all his life had planned on becoming a farmer, first went to the Congo as an agricultural missionary.

Before leaving for the Congo, he had little plans for becoming any kind of missionary. But one summer, while in college, he took a course at a university in Colorado. There, a minister leading the youth group he had joined told him about the missionary ministry.

"I told him I really wanted to farm, but he sent my name in anyway to the Board of Missions in New York, Wolford

"Several months passed and I assumed everything had fallen through and that was fine, but I heard later that summer that I had been accepted."

Despite the fact that Wolford sald he wasn't really that enthusiastic about the whole idea, "I felt I should do what I should," he said, so he went.

WHEN HE REACHED the Congo, he discovered that the people there were "extremely religious." "They already belleved in God as creator and in eternal life. But they didn't know anything about Christ. This is what we brought them," Wolford explained.

Despite the people's religious leanings. things were still difficult. "I tried every-thing I learned on the farm and nothing worked," he said, "because of the soil and climate. But then I did some experimenting and did have some suc-

It took almost the entire three years he was working in the Belgian Congo to discover his vocation. "I had a conversion experience the last year I was there. I really became a Christian in my own personal life then," he said.

After the three-year stay, he returned to the United States to marry Jean. How dld she feel about moving from Abingdon to the Belgian Congo for the rest of her

"I thought it was a pretty good idea because Marvin was going there," she laughs.

Jean was to meet her husband in New York the day he arrived from the Congo. She fully expected to be married in a church wedding, although she knew things were going to be a bit hectic with Wolford having to leave for Africa soon

But Jean got more than she bargained for. "We were married on the Bride and Groom' TV show," she explained, smiling, "It was wonderful for us because we didn't have any money at the time."

THE TV MARRIAGE came about when a friend of Jean's from Abingdon convinced her to write to the program. popular in the late 1950's, about her upcoming wedding. "Apparently they were interested when they heard Marvin had been in the Belgian Congo," she said.

The producers of the TV show called Jean's father one Sunday night to tell him about his plan. "My father thought it was a joke when they called. But we were married four days after Marvin got home," she said.

The TV wedding set the pace for the madcap type of life the Wolford's were to live in the upcoming years.

When we first went, we had to buy all our food in Zambla, about 1,000 miles away, and truck it in," said Mrs Wolf-

She said it took her almost three years before she could communicate adequately with the people who lived in her village. "It's all you can do to adjust to a new society and keep things sanitary in your home, besides try to learn a language," she said.

HER THREE children, the last two of whom were born in Africa, had no difficulty adjusting though. "Since we're in a bush area, they have a lot of freedom out there. They get along just fine. In fact, one of the boys commented the other day that he liked the United States, 'But I wouldn't want to stay more than a year,' he said."

Today neither Jean nor her husband seem to miss having given up the slow pace of a farm in Abingdon, Illinois, for the mission field of Africa.

"We have no regrets. We feel we've done what we should have done," Wolf-

Suburbs hustle to gear for Superhorse

Get ready for a blitz,

The first wave is expected to hit at 0900 hours Saturday when a throng of 40,000 to 60,000 people will begin funneling through the turnstyles to see the country's greatest horse, Secretariat.

For that one day, Arlington Park Race Track, Arlington Heights, Ill., will be the horse racing capital of the country.

A flurry of special preparations were reported yesterday from a variety of sources, including local police departments, nearby hotels and motels, bus lines and the rallroad, overseas National Air Lines and just about everyone connected with the special match race.

With the excitement there was also confusion over advance ticket sales, hotel reservations and even who Superhorse Secretariat will race against in the posed to go on sale until today. Even when tempted with an offer to pay "scalpers" " prices, the agent was unable to produce two clubbouse tickets.

Another ticket agent at Hond's clothing store, State and Jackson in Chicago, reported yesterday that he still had plenty of tickets. And Tom Rivera, public retations director at Arlington Park, said tickets will be available at the track today through Saturday. "We'll have room for everybody," Rivera promised,

For the first time in history, the grassy infield at Arlington Park will be opened to spectators who don't mind passing the day on a blanket or camp stool. The price of admission to the infield will be

Secretariat, the first Triple Crown winner in 25 years, will run in the eighth race Saturday, sometime between 5 and 5:30 p.m. The start of the first race has been moved up an hour to 1 p.m. and the day-long program will feature 10 races instead of the usual nine.

Rivera said the track is planning have several bands on the grounds and already has ordered additional concession supplies to feed what promises to be the biggest crowd at Arlington Park

The crowd will converge on Arlington Park by train, bus and automobile and additional carriers were being scheduled

"WE ARE GOING to add an extra train on Saturday," sald Richard Krehl, manager of passenger service for the Chicago and North Western Ry. "Normally we run three exten trains on Saturday, but we will definitely add a fourth."

With the extra trains will also come extra cars. Together they will be able to accommodate an additional 1,000 passen-

"I hope that is enough," Krehl said. A spokesman for Eagle Bus Lines, which brings racings fans to Arlington Park from Chicago's Loop, South and West sides, said the company will be running 11 or 12 buses Saturday.

But most racing fans will arrive by car and it will be the job of the Arlington

Heights and Rolling Meadows police departments to do what they can to avoid what could be one of the worst race track traffic jams in memory.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Chief Lewis Case said he will have 10 extra men directing traffic Saturday and will assign patrol cars at special points.

Five men will be directing inbound traffic and five handling outbound cars, said Rolling Meadows Traffic Supervisor Andrew Herbert who added that beyond that, "we're just going to play it by ear; that's all we can do."

Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber said regular holiday race track patrols will be augmented with additional officers and that his men will be out on the street earlier than usual because of the 9 a.m. track opening.

Secretariat himself will arrive at O'Hare International Airport about 1:30 p.m. Thursday on an Overseas National Airlines charter flight. In the past Secretariat has had a DC-9 jet freighter to himself but this time he will be sharing it with four other horses and a couple of grooms, an airline spokesman said.

WHILE AT Arlington Park, the $6 million horse will be under what Rivera termed "very tight security."

Saturday's race is a bonanza for hotels and motels close to the track most of which were sold out of rooms days ago. "We're overbooked right now," said a reservations clerk at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, located next door to the race track.

At the nearby Howard Johnson's in Palatine, a desk clerk said reservations were way above normal.

As preparations build toward his appearance at Arlington Park Saturday, it becomes ever more clear that Secretariat is a giant among horses, at the gate as well as on the track.

Mrs. Krause said that while there are records of how much the party spent and how much was collected in donations, she was not at liberty to provide this in-

All five candidates on the incumbent TOP ticket said they had nothing to do with the finances either during or after the campaign. They said they had not been contacted by Valenza about releasing the records and could provide no further information.

THE FINANCES of the TOP party came into question when candidates of the opposing Wheeling Independent Party challenged the amount of money being spent by the TOP party during the campaign. The WHIP candidates noted that TOP held several large cocktail parties, distributed substantial amounts of campaign literature, and erected several large campaign signs in the village.

The WHIP party released its financial records before the April 17 election. The WHIP treasurer reported that the party spent $985 during the campaign. WHIP candidates noted their expenses were kept to a bare minimum.

Throughout the campaign, TOP candidates merely stated that their campaign funds came from the donations of TOP supporters.

EVELYN DIENS, who was reelected village clerk, said last week finances were never discussed during any of the campaign meetings. "At the meetings I attended, I was not asked any questions nor was I involved in any discussion of the TOP finances," she said, "I have never seen the books in any campaign and I have never asked to. I have never concerned myself about it."

Mrs. Diens said she knew the contributions which financed the campaign "came from friends, but I don't know what friends."

Other TOP candidates supported Mrs. Diens statements that party finances were never discussed during campaign

When asked why finances were never discussed, Valenza said "It never came up." He said there was no special reason why the candidates were not kept up to date about campaign expenses.

Officials to weigh parks' progress

The Buffalo Grove Park Board Thursday night is scheduled to discuss the progress of construction at several park

The regular meeting of the board is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at Emmerlch Park, 150 Raupp Blvd.

Work is to begin within the next week on outdoor recreation facilities at Emmerich Park. Construction and remodeling has been going on inside the building for several months where a new wing has been added. Plans for Emmerich Park call for the addition of two lighted tennis courts, two ice skating rinks, two baseball diamonds, a children's playground, indoor and outdoor fireplaces and a patio.

OTHER PLANS are to relocate the storage facility, install a new drinking fountain and provide a new driveway and parking area. All areas of the remodeled park are to be connected with walkways.

The board is also scheduled to discuss construction in progress at Kilmer School on Golfview Terrace and plans for work at Cooper Junior High School on Plum Grove Circle.

The Buffalo Grove Recreation Association will use the present Cooper diamond until the season ends about July 15. That diamond will then be moved, a new major league diamond installed along with two girls' softball diamonds and a graded large area for football and soccer. This area is also to be suitable for ice skating, according to Stan Crosland, park director. The work at Cooper is supposed to be completed by Labor Day. OTHER ITEMS on the agenda of Thursday's meeting include:

• Progress report on the sale of $250,000 in bonds, completing the bond sale authorized by park district residents in a 1971 referendum.

· Contract for Peat-Marwick-Mitchell

auditors to audit the 1972-73 fiscal year public statement. · Discussion of park district participation in the July 4 celebration and use of

Wheeling: U.S. probes 'deals'

Copyright 1973, by Paddock Publications, The Herald

A team of Herald reporters and editors has been investigating political corruption in Wheeling for the past six months. The information the team compiled has been turned over to federal investigators and the U.S. Attorney's office.

The investigative team included Herald staffers Roger Capettini, James Vesely, Bob Casey, Barry Sigale, Anne Slavicek, Rich Honnek, Lea Tonkin, Lynn Asinof and Jill Bettner.

All Wheeling village officials and every developer in the village in the past five years will be subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged shakedowns of developers by public officials, a Heraid investigation has disclosed.

The subpoenas, many of which have been served, represent the latest step in an investigation of several months by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the U.S. Attorney's office.

The Herald has learned from reliable sources that indictments may be returned before the end of summer.

ASSISTANT U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner told the Herald numerous subpoenss have been served on village officials, village employes and developers, in an effort to establish "evidence of extortion by public officials of moneys from citi-

Skinner said the investigation is one of "top priority" in his office and that several investigators and lawyers are working on the case full time.

He said the investigation began "several months ago" on the basis of "citizen reports.

An additional source of information has been reporters from Paddock Publications who have, from time to time, provided information instrumental in the investigation." Skinger sold Monday.

A subpoena already has been served on Village Mgr. George Passolt, directing him to produce all pertinent village records. Additionally, federal investigators late last week were trying to locate former trustees William Hart and Michael Valenza to serve them with subpoenus, the Rerald has learned.

SEVERAL AREA developers, who the Herald will not identify, have made statements in the U.S. Attorney's office and more are expected in coming weeks.

While Skinner has refused to outline the scope and direction of the investigation, the Herald has learned federal investigators are seeking to apply the Hobbs Antl-Racketeering Act against public officials who place pressure on contractors who apply to the village for permission to build.

The Hobbs Act specifically prohibits obtaining property from another person even with his consent, "Induced by the wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence or fear or under color of official right." Punishable by fines up to $10,000 and 20 years in prison, or both, that section of the U.S. Code has been used frequently in the past to gain convictions of public officials who extorted money to guarantee favorable zoning and building approval.

Herald reporters have also learned investigators have developed a picture of the general pattern of alleged shakedowns of developers by public officials and employes in Wheeling.

That pattern begins when a developer first approaches the village seeking reroning and approval of his plans for a new development.

The developer, soon after his initial inquiry, will receive a telephone call outlining the "conditions" (payoffs) he must

Who's who in village politics

WILLIAM O. HART

A village trustee from 1968 to 1970, Hart moved to Florida, then returned to Wheeling a year later In 1971. He currently runs Night and Day Electric Sign Inc. of Wheeling along with Michael Valenza. His past official activities have included three years on the fire and police commission. He first moved to Wheeling in 1956.

MICHAEL VALENZA

A key figure for the last 10 years in approval of new developments in the village, Mike Valenza left the village board this spring when his term expired. He was first elected on a ticket with Village President Ted C. Scanlon in 1989. Valenza had moved to Wheeling 10 years earlier, and joined the village plan commission 1963. He served on the plan commission as its chairman and as acting director of planning until November, 1971.

TED C. SCANLON

In his ninth year as village president, Scanlon began his career in the village as police mag-Istrate in a local court in the 1950s. Another 40-year resident of the village, Scanion also served on the park board and as assistant director of Civil Defense. He currently works for Asplundh Tree Expert Co. He was first elected village president in 1965, ran unopposed for reelection in 1969, and won the seat again in the April elections.

GEORGE PASSOLT

Named Village Manager in November, 1971, Passolt began his career with the village as a part time village treasurer in 1965. In 1969 he became finance director under village manager Matthew Golden, then became acting village manager in 1970. Passolt worked 19 years for U. S. Gypsum before going to work full time for the village.

meet to gain village approval.

IT IS NOT believed all present and past members of the village board are involved or even have knowledge of the workings of the scheme.

The Herald has learned of one incident, however, in which a phone call was placed to a member of the village board while the board was in session, to notify him a required payoff had been received and that the zoning should be approved.

After the initial payoff, the Herald has learned, there have been occasions in which a developer has had to make additional payoffs to successfully obtain the building permits required before he can begin construction. One person involved in a payoff in the village has told the Herald and federal investigators he personally handed more than $10,000 in small bills to a high political figure to assure favorable zoning for

THE PERSON has stated he acted only as an intermediary in the transaction after holding the money for some time in a Palatine bank and later transferring it to a safe deposit drawer in the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank, presumably without knowledge of the banks.

The intermediary has explained to federal investigators he was "pressured" into cooperating and is seeking immunity from prosecution in return for future tes-

Several area developers also are expected to be granted immunity as the government centers its attention on publie officials.

MOST VILLAGE officials and area developers refused to comment on whether they had received subpoenas or if they appeared before a federal grand jury. Most village board members have confirmed, however, they have been informed of the subpoena to Passolt for village records. Trustee Ed Berger and a major developer in Wheeling said they expect to be subpoensed in the probe.

"I'm always concerned about something like this," Berger said, "because it can always give the village a black eye if they find something. I really don't know what they are looking for. I wish I knew. I think they'll subpoena all village offi-

Village Pres. Ted Scanion said he has not received a subpoena. He said Passolt had notified him of the situation but added, "That's Mr. Passolt's end of it," when asked if Passolt had complied with the directive.

Passolt refused to comment on the subpoena. "Federal grand jury matters are a matter of secrecy and therefore even if this is true I would have no comment to make," he said. He added, however, "Everybody is on a fishing expedition. I mean the newspapers."

Village Clerk Evelyn Diens said, however, four employes have been "getting several things together for the mannger."

For letters, there's a better way to fly than first class.

Sending important letters out of town by first class mail instead of Airmail is like sending business executives to important meetings on standby tickets.

What you save in money, you lose in other things; namely, speed and reliability.

Airmail gets sorted and processed before all regular mail (including all first class letters). This gives your letter all the advantages a person would get from skipping the check-in line.

Airmail always makes the first plane out. If first class mail flies, it flies standby, when there's space on the plane for it.

And since the first plane out is the first plane in, you can rely on Airmail to get there first. Airmail hardly ever takes more than two days to reach cities throughout the continental United States—often only one.

Finally, Airmail commands attention because it looks important. It tells an out-of-town customer that your company values his business enough to write him the quickest, most reliable way.

Your company spends at least $2.96 when you prepare and mail a letter. For three cents more, you can protect that investment with Airmail, the most reliable letter service going.

Wheeling records subpoenaed

Trustee reaction varied

Wheeling trustees reacted to the sub-poena of village building and zoning records for a federal grand jury investigation with varying degrees of con-

Some trustees were reluctant to comment on the matter, saying that grand jury investigations were supposed to remain secret. Others said the investigation appeared to be a routine matter and expressed little concern

Members of the village board were notified of the subpoens in a confidential memo sent by Village Mgr. George Pas-

TRUSTEE ED Berger said he had been advised of the subpoena a week or so ago. "I really don't know what's going on down there," be said, "I'm always concerned about something like this because it can always give the village a black eye if they find something."

When asked if he thought the investigation would reveal any wrongdoings, Berger said, "I really don't know. I don't really know what they are looking for. I wish I knew."

Berger said, however, he expected all of the village officials to be subpoensed to testify before the grand jury. "I think they'll subpoena all the village officials,"

Trustee Bill Hein said he was told that the investigation was similar to that being conducted in other towns. "I understand they are going through other municipalities," he said. "It's a matter of procedure. I don't know the implications of it as far as what they are doing down there.

TRUSTEE DON Jackson said he was advised the records had been subpoenaed. He said, however, he could not comment further because of the secrecy of all grand jury proceedings. "It's really quite premature right now to com-ment," he said.

According to Trustee John Koeppen, Wheeling is just one of several villages being investigated. "I think every village is being contacted," he said. "I was advised that they are checking into all of the towns."

Village Pres. Ted Scanlon said he knew nothing about the matter except that the records had been requested. He said he had no comment except that he had not personally received a subpoena. When asked if any action had been taken by the village on the subpoena, Scanlon said, "I don't know. That's Mr. Passolt's end of it."

Trustee Ron Bruhn said he had no comment on the matter since he had not been advised of the details of the situ-

Union meeting today

Contract woes may cause strike at Central Telephone

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT The 1,000-member Central Telephone Co. electrical workers union may strike

Officials of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 336, have called two strike meetings today.

Union negotiators are seeking membership authorization to call a strike if a contract is not settled by Saturday. The union represents all Central Telephone employes except management personnel.

The strike authorization vote will come at a 5 p.m. meeting of union members at the Des Plaines American Legion hall, Gold and East River roads. A morning meeting has been scheduled for members who work phone company night shifts.

A strike "is most likely," Thomas L. Bengley, president and business manager of the union, said during a break in negotiations at the Flying Carpet Motor Inn yesterday.

"IT'S SIMPLY a case of the company dragging its feet," he said.

Beagley said union officials at the meetings will explain progress in negotiations that started in mid-April. The union has settled contract terms "months after the contract expires. That's one of the problems members have been complaining about. Negotiations have run

"We notified the company in April; we put in notice very early that we wanted to settle (by contract end June 30.)

"The tactics are the same this year. Meetings have been far apart," he said. A spokesman for the telephone firm, which serves most of Des Plaines and Park Ridge, said "we have heard" about the union meeting.

"We're still negotiating. We'll continue to negotiate through the balance of the week. We're always hopeful for a settlement," the spokesman said.

One 25-year telephone company emplaye said he could not remember an employe wage strike.

"WE'VE GOT three more days to go," Beagley said yesterday. "Anything is possible. But, we'll know more after tomorrow night."

Beagley called the strike authorization vote, which will not automatically call a walkout, but will give union negotiators power to call one, "unusual"

The list of union demands is "too long to discuss." Beagley said.

The union contract "does not mention mediation," he said. The federal mediation board was notified when contract talks began

The union is not required to give the firm 30-day notice of intention to strike,

TV, bedspread stolen

Thieves forced their way into a first floor guest room of the Hollday Inn at Touhy Avenue and Mannheim Road late Wednesday and stole a color television set and bedspread worth $500, said Des Plaines police.

The break-in was discovered by Duane Ruburn of Los Angeles, Calif., who was staying in the room, according to police.

Downtown construction boom gets under way

The Des Plaines downtown construction boom is starting.

Step-off was quiet demolition of homes near Ashland and Lee streets last weekend on the alte of the proposed senior citizen apartment buildings.

Follow-up will be the move of city offices July 6 to provide a site for te $2.2 million city half-police building.

Final groundwork will be anticipated with city council approval next month of zoning to allow superblock shopping mall, office building and parking construction.

Buikling commissioners Issued a temporary occupancy permit yesterday for the former Scars building. The permit, which expires in 60 days and allows occupancy of the building during construction, was delayed since last month by a dispute over unapproved remodeling work at a garage behind the building and lack of a fire escape from second floor apartments The city originally planned to move to the Sears building May 1.

The move, from 1426-1428 Miner St., for the mayor's, clerk's and health department offices, will allow demolition of the former typewriter store. The six-story city hall will be built on the site, with construction planned by September.

Behrel said the city would seek bids to demolish the offices from firms that sought a city-financed senior citizens site clearance contract. W. & W. Wrecking and Trucking Co. of Des Plaines was low bidder on the house demolition at $2,985.

The city will finance the work, but will be reimbursed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development from funds allocated for the 129-unit buiiding. Behrel sald that the Cook County Housing Authority will seek bids for the building in August or September.

The wrecking firm cleared the 1.2 acre site Monday to the surprise of city officials, Behrel sald. A resident called the city clerk's office and asked for bricks from one of the demolished buildings and "that was the first time we knew they were down." he sald.

The remaining downtown constructon project - superblock - still faces council zoning approval. The council voted last week to authorize preparation of a zoning ordinance that would approve project plans for the shopping mall-office building.

Aldermen will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday to "review, air and discuss" the redevelopment plan.

Charge school board ignores demands

Parents, teachers finally get 'say'

Dist. 207 parents and teachers finally had their say before the Maine Township High School Board of Education.

The board agreed Monday night to give parent representative Darlene Rizzo and teachers' union president Dewane Barnes a place on the agenda.

Mrs. Rizzo and Barnes met the board's requirement of submitting a request to speak in writing 10 days in advance of the meeting.

For several months parents and teachers have organized to confront the board. Threats and counter-threats have been exchanged; coffees promoting parent-teacher unity have been held. More than have about 680 teachers. 150 persons attended the May board meeting and 120 teachers walked out when Barnes was not allowed to speak.

Salary negotiations were the basis of the trouble. During May the board cut off negotiations with teachers and adopted a salary schedule for 1973-74 charging the Maine Teacher's Assn. (MTA), the teachers' union with bad faith bargaining and representing only a minority of the faculty.

Two days later the MTA polled the faculty and won the support of 83 per cent of the 555 teachers voting. Maine schools

BARNES BROUGHT the figures to Monday's meeting and asked the board to resume negotiations. The MTA will use legal action to force the board back to the bargaining table if the board does not resume negotiations, he said.

Board President Robert Claus said the union would receive an answer in due course.

Barnes repeated the teachers' demand to have more voice in making decisions concerning education.

"Teachers by training and experience are qualified to make judgments about board policies. As professionals, we have a right and an obligation to insist that the board listen to our suggestions and recommendations," he said.

He added that the MTA conducted a survey this year asking if teachers thought their views were considered in decision making. Only 28 per cent of the teachers thought their opinions were represented to the board by the administration while 63 per cent thought their views are seldom presented and 11 per cent said "never." Another 68 per cent said teachers'

In 1972-73, the working cash fund money earned $210,845 in interest:

Another $50,845 was transferred to the building fund. Grazian said that the board put the lion's share of the interest in the educational fund to pay for teacher's salaries in the coming year.

He also said that the building fund has been "subsidizing" the educational fund, Custodial salaries, which could be paid from the educational fund are paid from the building fund, giving the building fund a deficit.

GRAZIAN SAID next year, a greater share of the interest should go into the building fund to help pay for completion of Maine North. Board member John Means said the district will still neeed a referendum to complete the school.

The board also approved the completion of Dee Road at Maine North, and promised not to annex the school to Niles until 1984. It also resolved that the school would not be annexed until Niles agreed to pay part of the construction costs on Dec Road,

The township now is picking up the tab for completing the roadway.

The board also amended its policy to allow two meetings every month instead of one. Meetings will be held at 8 p.m. on the second and fourth Monday of each month, usually in the faculty lounge at Maine East.

McConnell back on school board

Former school board member E. Hoy McConnell is the second person appointed to the seven-member High School

Dist. 207 Board since the April elections. John Means was appointed to fill a vacancy in the Maine Township school hoard two days after the April 14 elections. McConnell was appointed at Monday night's board meeting.

McConnell is replacing Michael Bartos who resigned in May because he was "disenchanted with what I saw going on in the board and the administration."

MUANS REPLACED Edward Gregory who accepted an executive position with the United Nations in New York Jan. 8, yet waited about 212 months before he announced his resignation to the board.

Gregory's resignation, dated March 31, came after the candidate's filing deadline for elections, it was withheld from the public for three weeks, until two days after the elections.

Bartos criticized the action, saying the position should have been filled during the elections. When he resigned, he asked the school board to hold a special election to fill both seats.

He also charged he was left out of discussions between board members several times in the past and had considered resigning since last year. He is moving to Dundee, which he said was only a secondary reason for resigning.

"Even if I were not moving, I would resign from the board," he said. At Monday's meeting, when McConnell was chosen, Board Pres. Robert Claus said the board was saving the taxpayers a considerable amount of money by not holding a special election to fill the seat.

McCONNELL, 58, served two threeyear terms on the Dist. 207 School Board. In December of 1970, he announced that he would not seek reelection. He said he did not want to go against the Park Ridge General Caucus tradition that a school board member can only serve for McConnell was school board president and chairman of the board's public relations and education committees.

While chairman of the public relations committee he coordinated efforts to pass a $15 million referendum, which was used to remodel the high schools and to partially build Maine North in unincorporated Des Plaines.

It was the district's last successful referendum. The district may be holding a referendum this fall to complete Malne

Before his election to the Dist. 207 board. McConnell was president of the Franklin School PTA in Park Ridge. He and his wife Dorothy live in Park Ridge and have four children.

Most of town's parks honor famous conservationists

by FRED GACA

Dinosaur eggs, whales, bontanical gardens, national forests, rare birds - these subjects may be foreign to Elk Grove village residents, but they shouldn't be.

These subjects are related to the village in a very obvious manner, disfused throughout the neighborhoods. They should be as plain as the park down the

Because most of the parks in the village are named for men in conservation - men who found the first dinesaur eggs, who established the first and the largest botanical gardens, who planted apple trees and studied the world's birds. And many more.

ROY C. ANDREWS, John Bartram and David Fairchild are among the naturalists and conservationists who may not be well known, but who were selected as namesakes for parks in 1967.

Andrews was an American explorer, zoologist and author. Born in 1884, he was considered one of the world's greatest authorities on whales until his death in 1960. Thus Andrews Park at Oakton Street and Rkige Road was named.

Amirews led expeditions into China, Burma, Outer Mongolia and Central Asia. During one of these expeditions, the first discovery of dinosaur eggs was John Bartram, born in 1609, is considered the "Father of American Botany." A friend of George Washington and Ben-Jamin Franklin, he founded the first bontanical garden in America at Kingsessing, Pa. The state is still maintained as Bartram Gardens. Bartram Park is at Verde Lane and Crest Avenue.

David Fairchild, for whom Fairchild Park at Ridge Avenue and Cloarmont Drive is named, was both an American betanist and explorer. He brought more than 200,000 species of plants to the United States from his travels throughout the world, and established Fairchild Tropleat Gardens near Miami. Fla., the largest botanical gardens in America

THE PARKS WEREN'T olways named ofter such distinguished men. When the park district was formed in 1966, each park was named for its location. For example, Verde-Creat Park was at Verde Lane and Crest Avenue, Tonne Park was nt Tonne Road near Devon Avenue.

Early in 1967, the park district appointed a citizens committee to recommend appropriate names for the parks. After several months of work, the committee recommended that the parks be named after Americans who worked with conservation and wildlife.

The report stated, "Throughout American history many people have contributed to conservation, preservation and appreciation of animal and plant life in their natural states . . . To name the parks of Elk Grove Village after such people, in the opinion of the committee, would be a small but appropriate gesture of appreciation."

The park board accepted the recommendation, renamed the existing parks and has also named new parks in the same manner

THE ONLY exceptions to the rule are the Lions and Jaycees parks, named for the village service clubs who contributed to the development of those parks.

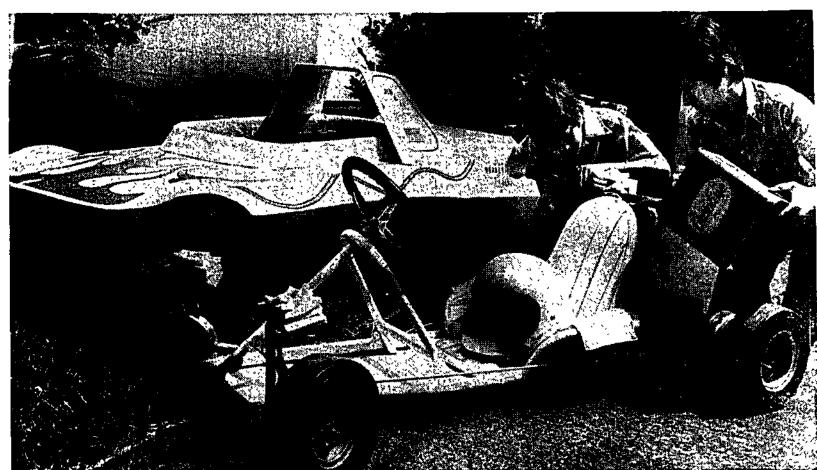

Most of the other park namesakes are more well-known. Brief biographs of the men for whom the other parks in the village are named follows.

Appleseed Park, Ridge Avenue and Howard Street, was named for the folk hero Johnny Appleseed (John Chapman), Numerous legends have been told about Appleseed and it is hard to separate fact from fantasy.

He is reported to have spent 40 years niong the Ohio River Valley in the early 1800's planting trees and cultivating or-

They're wild about cars

by CAROL RHYNE

The Mergens Bros. Firebug may be new to the drag strip circuit, but so are the two Mergens brothers. Although just reaching their teens, the boys from Elk Grove Village have turned an avid interest in cars into a constructive activity. Al and Jim, who live at 110 Essex Rd., started building push carts "years ago" by placing planks on four wheels. Today, 13-year-old Al and 12-year-old Jim are beyond soap-box transportation and are building go-cart racers with competition

Their newest machine, the 4-foot Fire-bug, is a light-weight funny car. Funny cars appeared on the drag racing scene in the mid-1960s. They consist of a frame with a competition engine, covered by a Fiberglas shell body that is usually very elaborately painted.

The Firebug, a little brother to the high-powered dragsters, has reached speeds up to 65 miles per hour. So far only drag racer and neighbor Frank Filskov has tested the car on an "unnamed street," but the boys hope to get their chances at the wheel soon.

THE MANAGER at the Great Lakes Drag Way at Union Grove, Wis., likes to run funny cars for exhibition, and Al and Jim may try to take the Firebug there later this summer, says Allen Mergens, the boys' father and captain in the village fire department.

"The Firebug is a crowd pleaser, and if the boys run it in exhibition, there is not as great a danger of being hurt," the father said.

Mergens says it is a problem finding a place for the boys to drive and maybe Al and Jim will be able to run the Firebug in exhibition at the raceway. Al and Jim designed selves and built it with the help of their father. The pair said they got the idea to build their own funny car after watching professional funny cars race last Labor

For about $300, not counting labor, the boys put together the Firebug dragster with a McCulloch number 10 chain-saw motor. The one-eighth-inch fiberglas body was built over a corrugated card-board mold, and it took about two weeks to sand and smooth it into shape. The fuel is a mixture of oil and gasoline.

Work on the Firebug started after Christmas, and the car was finished in April. Al and Jim presented their new car at the J. C. Penney auto show this spring at Woodfield Shopping Center, and came away with a plaque for the smallest car in the show.

MERGENS said if there is a demand for bodies that fit go-cart frames, the boys might make a mold of their car and

The father said he encourages the boys' interest in cars because he feels it is constructive, and the mechanical knowledge will come in handy later. "It is really a good father-son venture," said Mergens, who has built boats, go-carts and a dune buggy.

Al and Jim say they have always been interested in drag racing, but their hobby got a boost when they made friends with Filskov. "On May 10, 1970, Frank came over to the house with a black and white checkered finish flag that he won that day, as thanks for running an errand for him before the race," Al said. "And ever since then we've been hanging around him," Jim added.

ONE LOOK in the boys' bedroom and it is easy to tell they are interested in cars, cars and more cars. The walls and one corner of the ceiling are covered with pictures of dragsters and sports ears the boys cut out of their own hot rod magazine subscriptions.

Jim says that when he's older, he wants to race go-carts for money. "I started out building cars, and I might as well keep on going," he said. "I would like to race as a side profession, but right now I don't know what I'd rather do for a living other than collect colns," At said.

"The purpose was to find out how many times we can show a commercial before we annoy, before it wears out. And do different commercials, like cartoons versus live performers, affect people differently."

Commercials were viewed at the public opinion center in screening rooms, and after each 30-to 60-second spot, the women filled out a questionnaire rating the message. The first six days the women saw the same nine commercials. The last four days, five new commercials were added to the group.

$10,000 in 'hike' pledges collected

Pledges totaling nearly $10,000 have been collected from participants in the April "Hike for Your Neighbor" to benefit the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

The $10,000 figure represents pledges from 450 of the nearly 900 people who participated in the annual like.

A second round of telephone calling was completed over the weekend to remind participants to turn in their pledges. "The first round (of telephone calling) brought a good healthy response and we are hoping for the same this time," said Rena Trever, treasurer of the center's board of directors.

Collections this year are following the same pattern as in the past, according to Mrs. Trevor. Last year pledges were collected from approximately 700 of the 800

Pledges have been averaging more than $20 from each marcher and the center is still hopeful of meeting its $20,000

Marchers received pledges of money for each mile they walked in the 20-mile hike from various sponsors. The money collected in the hike is of particular importance this year because of the end of federal funding and dismantling of the Office of Economic Opportunity ordered by President Nixon.

Suburbs hustle for Superhorse

Get ready for a bilitz.

The first wave is expected to hit at 0000 hours Saturday when a throng of 40,000 to $0,000 people will begin funneling through the turnstyles to see the country's greatest horse, Secretariat.

For that one day, Arlington Park Race Track, Arlington Heights, Ill., will be the horse racing capital of the country.

A flurry of special preparations were reported yesterday from a variety of sources, including local police departments, nearby hotels and motels, bus lines and the railroad, overseas National Air Lines and just about everyone connected with the special match race.

With the excitement there was also confusion over advance ticket sales, hotel reservations and oven who Superhorse Secretariat will race against in the $100,000 event.

"WHAT MORE CAN I tell you except that we're sold out," sald one advance sales ticket agent yesterday, despite the fact that tickets originally were not supposed to go on sale until today.

Even when tempted with an offer to pay "scalpers" " prices, the agent was unable to produce two clubhouse tickets.

Another ticket agent at Bond's clothing store, State and Jockson in Chicago, reported yesterday that he still had plenty of tickets. And Tom Rivera, public relations director at Arlington Park, said tickets will be available at the track today through Salurdny.

"We'll have room for everybody," flivera promised.

For the first time in history, the grassy infield at Arlington Park will be opened to spectators who don't mind passing the day on a blanket or camp stool. The price of admission to the infield will be $1,50.

The price of admission to the clubhouse and grandstand will remain unchanged for Saturday's race, however, an additional $2 will be charged for a reserved scat.

"IT'S THE ONLY extra cost in the whole thing," Rivera said. "Normally you'd pay $10 a seat to see an event like

Secretariat, the first Triple Crown winner in 25 years, will run in the eighth race Saturday, sometime between 5 and 5:30 p.m. The start of the first race has been moved up an hour to 1 p.m. and the day-long program will feature 19 races instead of the usual nine.

Rivera said the track is planning to have several bands on the grounds and

Good relations goal of new citizens' panel

Total community relations is the goal of a new citizens' committee organized by Schaumburg Township Dist. 54.

The committee, made up of representatives of various civic, community and parent-teacher association groups, will disseminate school information to the public. It will also work to establish good relationships between the school district and other governmental units, according to its chairman, board member Gordon Thoren.

The community relations panel also plans to work in the development of awareness preceding the next school referendum, Thoren said recently.

"Normally citizens only approach the school board when they have problems, but it is our hope to bring people in intentionally in order to achieve better to-tal community relations," Thoren explained.

AT ITS FIRST meeting week before last, the group examined the Dist. 51 annual report, Board-O-Gram and a proposed school district altitude survey.

Suggestions to improve the annual report by listing average teachers and administrative salaries and an explanation of the district's policy concerning leased transportation rather than purchasing its own were offered by Jim Blankenship. Blankenship represents the Village of Schaumburg on the committee.

aiready has ordered additional concession supplies to feed what promises to be the biggest crowd at Arlington Park since 1941.

The crowd will converge on Arlington Park by train, bus and automobile and additional carriers were being scheduled yesterday.

"WE ARE GOING to add an extratrain on Saturday," said Richard Krehl, manager of passenger service for the Chicago and North Western Ry. "Normally we run three extra trains on Saturday, but we will definitely add a fourth."

With the extra trains will also come extra cars. Together they will be able to accommodate an additional 1,600 passen-

"I hope that is enough," Krehl said.

A spokesman for Eagle Bus Lines, which brings racings fans to Arlington Park from Chicago's Loop, South and West sides, said the company will be running 11 or 12 buses Saturday.

But most racing fans will arrive by car and it will be the job of the Arlington Heights and Rolling Moadows police departments to do what they can to avoid what could be one of the worst race track traffic jams in memory.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Chief Lewis Case said he will have 10 extra men directing traffic Saturday and will assign patrol cars at special points.

Five men will be directing inbound traffic and five handling outbound cars, said Rolling Meadows Traffic Supervisor Andrew Herbert who added that heyond that, "we're just going to play it by ear; that's all we can do."

Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber said regular holiday race track patrols will be augmented with additional officers and that his men will be out on the street earlier than usual because of the 9 a.m. track opening.

Secretariat himself will arrive at O'Hare International Airport about 1:30 p.m. Thursday on an Overseas National Airlines charter flight. In the past Secre-tariat has had a DC-9 jet freighter to himself but this time he will be sharing it with four other horses and a couple of grooms, an airline spokesman sald.

WHILE AT Arlington Park, the $6 mil-lion horse will be under what Rivera termed "very tight security."

Saturday's race is a bonanza for hotels and motels close to the track most of which were sold out of rooms days ago.

"We're overbooked right now," said a reservations clerk at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, located next door to the race track.

At the nearby Howard Johnson's in Palatine, a desk clerk sald reservations were way above normal.

As proparations build toward his appearance at Arlington Park Saturday, it becomes over more clear that Secretarlat is a giant among horses, at the gate as well as on the track.

Mail engagement leads to bush villages of the Congo

by MARY HOULIHAN

When Jean Wolford looks out of her kitchen window, she sees bush villagers of Zaire, formerly the Belgian Congo in Africa, carrying water buckets and farming small gardens.

She probably finds it hard to believe that a three-year engagement by mall to a Midwest minister could ever have taken her that far.

When Jean first began dating the now-Rev. Marvin Wolford in high school in her home town of Ablagdon, Ill., her only thoughts were of settling down on a farm and having a few children.

BUT TODAY, Jean Wolford, married to the Rev. Wolford almost 16 years, expects surprise as a natural element in her life. She has lived in Zaire through two nationalistic uprisings, one in 1960, the other in 1968, and somehow she's managed to continue to look like a typical minister's wife.

Mrs. Wolford and her husband were in Mount Prospect last weekend for a visit during a missionary furlough from the Congo. Most of the weekend was spent telling members from Trinity United and South Community-Baptist churches (Dout their fives in Zaire, and their needs in the church community in which they

"We're quite fortunate. We have a Methodist hospital where we live, and electric lights," said the Rev. Wolford.

"Our main job now is translating the Bible," he said. Under the Wolfords' direction the Bible has been translated into two languages and covers the local dislects spoken by more than 10 tribes in the area in which he lives. More recently, the books of Genesis and Exodus, as well as commentary on the Old Testament have been translated and

ALONG WITH HIS many other activities, Wolford is also a local district superintendent of the local village Methodist Church.

His story of how he traveled from Ablugdon to Zaire is interesting as well as surprising. Wolford, who all his life had planned on becoming a former, first went to the Congo as an agricultural misslonary.

Before leaving for the Congo, he had little plans for becoming any kind of misslonary. But one summer, while in college, he took a course at a university in Colorado. There, a minister leading the youth group he had joined told him about the missionary ministry.

"I told him I really wanted to farm, but he sent my name in anyway to the Board of Missions in New York, Wolford

"Several months passed and I assumed everything had follen through and that was fine, but I heard later that summer that I had been accepted."

Despite the fact that Wolford said he wasn't really that enthusiastic about the whole idea, "I felt I should do what I should," he said, so he went,

WHEN HE REACHED the Congo, he discovered that the people there were "extremely religious." "They already belleved in God as creator and in eternal life. But they didn't know anything about Christ. This is what we brought them," Wolford explained.

Despite the people's religious leanings, things were still difficult. "I tried everything I learned on the farm and nothing worked," he sald, "because of the soil and climate. But then I did some experimenting and did have some suc-

It took almost the entire three years he was working in the Belgian Congo to discover his vocation. "I had a conversion experience the last year I was there. I really became a Christian in my own personal life then," he said. After the three-year stay, he returned to the United States to marry Jean, How did she feel about moving from Abingdon to the Belgian Congo for the rest of her "I thought it was a pretty good idea because Marvin was going there," she

Jean was to meet her husband in New York the day he arrived from the Congo. She fully expected to be married in a church wedding, although she knew things were going to be a bit hectic with Wolford having to leave for Africa soon

But Jean got more than she bargained for. "We were married on the 'Bride and Groom' TV show," she explained, smiling. "It was wonderful for us because we didn't have any money at the time.'

THE TV MARRIAGE came about when a friend of Jean's from Abingdon convinced her to write to the program. popular in the late 1950's, about her upcoming wedding. "Apparently they were Interested when they heard Marvin had been in the Belgian Congo," she said.

The producers of the TV show called Jean's father one Sunday night to tell him about his plan. "My father thought it was a joke when they called. But we were married four days after Marvin got home," she said.

The TV wedding set the pace for the madeap type of life the Wolford's were to live in the upcoming years.

"When we first went, we had to buy all our food in Zambia, about 1,000 miles away, and truck it in," said Mrs Wolf-

She said it took her almost three years before she could communicate adequately with the people who lived in her village. "It's all you can do to adjust to a new society and keep things sanitary in your home, besides try to learn a langunge," she said.

HER THREE children, the last two of whom were born in Africa, had no difficulty adjusting though, "Since we're in a bush area, they have a lot of freedom out there. They get along just fine. In fact, one of the boys commented the other day that he liked the United States, 'But I wouldn't want to stay more than a year,' he said."

Today neither Jean nor her husband seem to miss having given up the slow pace of a farm in Abingdon, Illinois, for the mission field of Africa.

'We have no regrets. We feel we've done what we should have done," Wolf-

Trustee says Braun shouldn't receive raise

Palatine Village Mgr. Berton G. Brauan will not get a salary increase this year if one village trustee has anything to say about it.

Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Jr. this week opposed giving Braun a 5 per cent nay like because of the village manager's outburst in defense of Police Chief Robert R. Centner.

Braun lambasted the trustees Monday night for pressuring Centner to resign on the basis of "third-hand comments picked up in back rooms."

Coughlin then suggested that Braun, himself, resign "if he is as unhappy as he says he is about the way we approach our tasks."

Minutes later, when an ordinance providing salary increases for department heads, including Braun, came before the village board, Coughlin spoke out against increasing Braun's salary,

Other trustees present, however, voted to adopt the salary ordinance. It falled to pass because four affirmative votes are preded; the vote was 3-1.

The ordinance, which had been tentatively approved by the trustees during an executive session meeting last week, will be voted on again at next week's meet-

Pay for cafeteria workers, who generally work part-time, will range from $2.15 to $3.50 an hour. Cafeteria managers will receive between $5,565 and $6,846 a year.

The district's 111 administrators received an over-all average increase of about 4.9 per cent. Raises were distributed according to merit evaluations. The lowest salary next year will be $17,680, paid to two deans. The highest salary is $20,000 for the two assistant superintendents.

The $2,000 raise for Supt. Gilbert will bring his total salary for next year to $38.500. He received $36,500 this year.

IN A RELATED action, the board approved an operating budget for the 1973-74 school year calling for total ex-penditures of $35,379,300. The budget, which may change if a new formula for state school aid is passed this week by the Illinois General Assembly, calls for total revenue of $37,139,300.

The education fund, the largest of six separate budget funds which is used to pay for teachers and education supplies, totals $25,855,000, an increase of 17.5 per cent over last year's total of $22,032,000.

The budget also contains a working cash fund of $1,540,000 which can be used for loans to other operating funds if revenues should fall below expenditures.

Laer this summer the district will approve an official levy budget which will list the amounts of money the district expects to receive from next year's property tax bills.

Superhorse!

Suburbs hustle in preparation for Saturday's crush of thousands at Arlington Park

Get ready for a biltz.

One ready for a fact.

The first wave is expected to hit at 0900 hours Saturday when a throng of 40,000 to 60,000 people will begin funneling through the turnstyles to see the country's greatest horse, Secretariat.

For that one day, Arlington Park Race Track, Arlington Heights, Ill., will be the horse racing capital of the country.

A flurry of special preparations were reported yesterday from a variety of sources, including local police departments, nearby hotels and motels, bus lines and the railroad, overseas National Air Lines and just about everyone connected with the special match race.

With the excitement there was also confusion over advance ticket sales, hotel reservations and even who Superhorse Secretariat will race against in the $100,000 event.

"WHAT MORE CAN I tell you except that wo're sold out," said one advance sales ticket agent yesterday, despite the fact that tickets originally were not supposed to go on sale until today.

Even when tempted with an offer to pay "scalpers" " prices, the agent was unable to produce two clubhouse tickets.

Another ticket agent at Bond's clothing store, State and Jackson in Chicago, reported yesterday that he still had plenty of tickets. And Tom Rivera, public relations director at Arlington Park, said tickets will be available at the track today through Saturday.

era promised.

For the first time in history, the grassy infield at Arlington Park will be opened to spectators who don't mind passing the day on a blanket or camp stool. The price of admission to the infield will be $1.50.

The price of admission to the clubhouse and grandstand will remain unchanged for Saturday's race, however, an additional $2 will be charged for a reserved seat.

"IT'S THE ONLY extra cost in the whole thing," Rivera said. "Normally you'd pay $40 a seat to see an event like this."

Regular grandstand admission to Arlington Park is $1.50; the clubhouse is $2.75.

Sccretariat, the first Triple Crown winner in 25 years, will run in the eighth race Saturday, sometime between 5 and 5:30 p.m. The start of the first race has been moved up an hour to 1 p.m. and the day-long program will feature 10 races instead of the usual nine.

Rivera said the track is planning to have several bands on the grounds and already has ordered additional concession supplies to feed what promises to be the biggest crowd at Arlington Park since 1941.

The crowd will converge on Arlington Park by train, bus and automobile and additional carriers were being scheduled yesterday.

"WE ARE GOING to add an extra train on Saturday," said Richard Krehl, manager of passenger service for the Chicago and North Western Ry. "Normally we run three extra trains on Saturday, but we will definitely add a fourth."

With the extra trains will also come extra cars. Together they will be able to accommodate an additional 1,600 passengers

"I hope that is enough," Krehl said.
A spokesman for Eagle Bus Lines, which brings racings fans to Arlington Park from Chicago's Loop, South and West sides, said the company will be running 11 or 12 buses Saturday.

But most racing fans will arrive by car and it will be the job of the Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows police departments to do what they can to avoid what could be one of the worst race track traffic jams in memory.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Chief Lewis Case said he will have 10 extra men directing traffic Saturday and will assign patrol cars at special points. Five men will be directing inbound traffic and five handling outbound cars, said Rolling Meadows Traffic Supervisor Andrew Herbert who added that beyond that, "we're just going to play it by ear; that's all we can do." Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber said regular holiday race track patrols will be augmented with additional officers and that his men will be out on the street earlier than usual because of the 9 a.m. track opening.

Secretariat himself will arrive at O'Here International Airport about 1:30 p.m. Thursday on an Overseas National Airlines charter flight. In the past Secretariat has had a DC-9 jet freighter to himself but this time he will be sharing it with four other horses and a couple of grooms, an airline spokesman said.

WITLE AT Arlington Park, the $6 million horse will be under what Rivera termed "very tight security."

Saturday's race is a bonanza for hotels

Saturday's race is a bonanza for hotels and motels close to the track most of which were sold out of rooms days ago-"We're overbooked right now," said a reservations clerk at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, located next door to the race track.

At the nearby Howard Johnson's in

As preparations build toward his ap-

As preparations build toward his appearance at Arlington Park Saturday, it becomes ever more clear that Secretariat is a giant among horses, at the gate as well as on the track.

Algonquin-Wilke, Euclid-Wilke crossings accident traps

Are these problem intersections being ignored?

by JOE SWICKARD

Any motorist who has waited at Wilke Road for a chance to dash into the fast flow of traffic on Algonquin Road would probably say a traffic light there would be a welcome addition to the intersection.

Despite 113 auto accidents in the past 2½ years, there are no plans for such traffic control signals.

And anyone who has been trapped in traffic at Wilke Road and Euclid Avenue while the other drivers sort out the right-of-way through the fourway stop would probably say traffic lights would ease matters.

DESPITE 70 auto accidents in the past 2½ years, there are no plans for such traffic control signals. Itoger DeLong, owner of a service station on the corner of New Wilke and Algonquin roads, watched the traffic speed by and said, "Yeah, it's pretty bad here. There have been lots of accidents and a lot more near misses. I'd say there have been about 20 crashes in the year and a half I've been here."

SGT. JACK WEBER, of the Arlington Heights Police Traffic Division, while admitting to a serious situaton at the intersection, at first said De-Long's count was too high.

But a check through the files showed the station operator's estimate acceptable. Eight traffic accidents involving at least property damage to the cars have been handled by the Ariington Heights police in the first half of the year.

PATIENCE IS A virtue, especially when a driver on New Wilke Road attempts to negotiate a turn onto Algonquin Road. Despite increasing accident rates, no traffic control signals are planned for the intersection.

Weber sald a more accurate indicator of the problem would be a total of accidents on both New and Old Wilke roads at Algonquin.

"When you take both together, you have 44 accidents since January, 1971. And those are just the ones our department has handled. Rolling Meadows shares the patrol with us there," Weber said.

Andy Herbert, Rolling Meadows police traffic supervisor said his department had handled 69 accidents at the two intersections since January, 1971

1971. BOTH WEBER and Herbert said Development of the area with apartments and shopping areas with accompanying increased traffic flow have contributed to the soaring statistics, they said.

Rolling Meadows Ald. James Huddleston (4th), who has staunchly fought for traffic control devices at the Wilke-Algonquin intersection located in his ward, said he is gathering material on accident rates at the intersection to send to Springfield. Huddleston hopes to prompt the division of highways to approve traffic

Ilghts at the intersection.

According to Weber, several factors contribute to the number of accidents other than the increased number of cars.

"The driver turning left from Wilke has to watch four lanes of fast traffic. This is in addition to having two left turn lanes. The car next to you may start out so you do, too, without a clear field of vision," he said.

The type of traffic on Algonquin is another problem, he said.

"THERE MIGHT BE a truck on the outside lane and it would appear you can make the turn. But, on the inside lane, a car is passing that truck and you don't see it." Allen Sander, Arlington Heights village engineer, said there are no plans for establishing traffic lights at the intersection at the present time, although he said it's a known dangerous crossing.

The problems blocking traffic control signals are many fold.

Weber explained, "Algonquin is a state road (Illinois Rte. 62) running through two municipalities. And the county plans to complete the link of New Wilke to Golf Road sometime this year."

So what is now a three-way intersection will shortly become a fourway intersection without stop lights.

"We expect a significant increase in the flow of traffic when the link is completed. It'll be a major north-south route through the village. Now, we only have Arlington Heights Road," he said.

WEBER SAID the village would have to make a survey of the traffic flows and patterns before applying for state warrants for the signals.

"In layman's terms, a warrant is a detailed study of suggested apparatus, in this case a light system. You need to know the number of cars over a number of hours and the possible conflicts between the cars," he

The Wilke extension plays a major role in future planning, Weber said. "In ball park figures, it costs $70,000 to put in a three-way light at the corner. The question is whether you want to spend that money now and then have to go back in a year or two and change the system when Wilke goes through to Golf, ' he said.

"It is my guess that the state warrants would be met when they com-plete the link. We'll get a jot of movement then." he speculated.

HUDDLESTON SAID a plan is being considered to fund traffic lights under the federal TOPICS highway program. Under the plan, the city could apply to share the cost of the light with the state and with Arlington Heights.

The state would pay half the cost of the light while the municipalities would each pay one-quarter, Huddleston said.

The plan, however, is still in the discussion stage since Huddleston isn't sure whether the lights would be placed at New Wilke Road and Algonquin or Old Wilke Road and Al-

Two miles north of the Wilke-Algonquin situation is the four-way stop at Wilke and Euclid Avenue.

Traffic from the race track, expressway and Northwest Highway converge here for a battle of nerves.

DRIVERS OFTEN try to bluff their way through by taking advantage of another car making a turn. A polite driver often finds that when he gives the go-ahead to an on-coming car to make a left turn, he has opened the way for drivers on the cross road to make a dash for it.

Since 1971, the game of bluff and back down has resulted in 70 auto accidents.

Again, the intersection involves Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights jurisdiction.

"We have three of the four corners and 60 accidents," Weber said.

Rolling Meadows controls the southwest corner and has handled 10 accidents since the beginning of 1971, Herbert said.

SANDER SAID no studies have been made concerning traffic lights here, either.

Although this one is also recognized as a bad corner, Sander said no money has been budgeted so there will be no corrective measures in the next year or two.

Sander also said "there has been no pressure" from citizens to install lights at the corners.

Once again, any future traffic lights would be the result of cooperation between Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and the state, he said.

HERE TOO, Weber sees nothing but a large increase in the traffic flow once the link to Golf Road is completed.

Given the factors of increased traffic and an absence of state warrants, the situations along Wilke Road will only get worse.

Until such time as traffic lights are installed, drivers would be advised to follow the late Vince Lombardi's maxim for a successful power sweep: "Run to daylight."

Castor Center signup set for new students

New residents of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 with elementary-age children may register them at the E. S. Castor Administration Center, 505 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

Registration will be from July 30 to Aug. 20. Children need not accompany their parents to registration, which will be open from 9 a..m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Parents will be required to show a transfer or other evidence of the provious school their chikl attended and an official birth certificate at the time of registration. Hospital or baptismal cerifficates are not acceptable proof of date of birth. In order to be eligible for kindergarten, children must be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1.

Forms that the parent will be requested to complete will ask for information concerning the name and telephone number of the local physician and of two reliable individuals in the community who can be called in case of an emergency when the parents cannot be reached. A BOOK RENTAL fee of $10 for children in kindergarten through sixth grade and $11 for children in junior high will be collected at the time of registration.

Insurance plans for students also will be available at the time of registration. There are two plans: a $2.60 premium which provides coverage from the time the child leaves home until he returns and an $18 premium which provides 24hour coverage during the school year.

All schools in the district will be participating in a registration by mail program this year. This program will provide parents who have children in the district with information pertaining to the beginning of school. Parents will receive registration materials the second week of July.

it the schools the children will attend on Aug. 31 between 2 and 3:30 p.m. The first day of school is Sept. 4.

Council to decide bakery outlet's fate

The outcome of a proposal to build a bakery thrift store and distribution center on Kirchoff Road east of Rohlwing Road will be decided July 10 by the Rolling Meadows City Council.

The plan, which calls for the Continental Baking Co. to build a thrift store outlet on a 11/4-acre site immediately east of the Sunoco service station on the south side of Kirchoff Road, was formally presented to the council last night.

The proposal again drew the ire of residents of Holly Lane immediately behind the property. The residents have objected to the plan because they say the site is flood plain land and is located in the midst of a residential area.

The site is in unincorporated Cook County. The Continental Baking Co. already has requested approval for its plan from the county, but county zoning officials indicated last month they would not grant approval of the plan.

During the public hearing last night, Ald. Fredrick Jacobson (5th), accused the company of lying to a special city zoning commission last month when it said approval would not be sought from

BUT DWIGHT ADAMS, attorney for the bakery, said that approval was sought only because a continuance in the matter would not be granted by the county. "Our intention has always been to get our zoning from the city," Adams said. He said water and sewer utilities for the site must come from the city. "I think I can say that if the city turns us down and the county grants us the zoning, the bakery will not be built," Adams said.

The plan has already been rejected by a special city zoning commission. Final decision on the proposal, however, rests with the city council.

Residents last night also voiced opposition to the company's lack of planning for development of the entire 11/2-acre site. Plans now call for building only on the western portion of the land, since the eastern portion is flood plain land.

Ron Olsen, architect for the project, said there are currently no plans to de-

ALD. THOMAS SCANLAN (1st), told the council that he did not think the site "was an ideal location" for the bakery. He also warned the council against strip zoning on Kirchoff Road, which would make it an entirely commercial road.

"I think we are up against the land developers," he told the council, adding that Algonquin Road has already suffered from strip zoning and that Hicks Road, Plum Grove Road and Kirchoff Road are facing the same threat.

Hoffman Estates may ask water panel membership

The Village of Hoffman Estates may to "investigate DAMP and see whether allocation of water from Lake Michigan.

DAMP, formed 15 years ago, is comprised of Des Plaines, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine, although Des Plaines has initiated action to withdraw from the commission. DAMP was granted an allocation of Lake Michigan water by the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) in 1972, that would have permitted it to install a pipeline to the lake to provide residents with an adequate supply of drinking water.

IDOT must hold new hearings and make new allocations, to comply with requirements set forth in a court ruling that said initial action was taken improp-

Hoffman Estates Mayor Virginia Hayter, speaking yesterday, noted the village has been told by two outside consulting firms, both specialists in water supply systems, it should look to Loke Michigan to fill its long-range water needs.

The village now uses deep and shallow wells as its water sources, but the deep level water table is dropping due to the increasing number of suburban wells drawing from it. Shallow wells are less dependable water supplies than deep wells, because they are affected by rainfall conditions each year. In dry years, the shallow well may not be adequate to meet village demands, the consultants have reported.

Because of the great expense involved in installing a pipeline to Lake Michigan. sold Mrs. Hayler, the village should start long term planning for the project now, when the need is not immediate.

If the village should join DAMP, the high costs would be shored with other to the same pipeline. But even sharing the cost, it would probably be necessary to fevy a special tax or obtain voter anproval of a bond issue referendum, she suggested.

The village does not have all the necessary information concerning DAMP to make such a decision immediately, Mrs. Hayter said. She raised the subject at a committee of the whole meeting Monday to try to interest village trustees in acquainting themselves with the commission and recent events concerning water supply in the region.

She urged the board's water committee

Village orders construction firm to use more caution

by NANCY COWGER

A replay of an electric cable accident, but with more serious consequences the second time, prompted the Holfman Estates Village Board to demand stronger preventive measures from Rock Road Construction Co.

The second incident was reported to the board by James McDonald, 192 Gen-try Rd., who two weeks ago complained about delays in repairing a broken cable near his home.

This week McDonald said the Incident reoccuring in the same location and under the same type of circumstances indicated "It was not an accident, it was just plain negligent."

The cables have been broken by dump trucks moving with the dump bed in the raised position. The first time, June 4, there was slight damage to homes in the area from the whiplashing wires, according to Robert C. Boechk, assistant safety director. That cable was not carrying an electric current.

BUT THE SECOND time, June 20, the cable was carrying a current of 7,200 volts, according to James Fasano, 196 Gentry, and it burned a 25-foot strip of grass when the current acred between the ends of the wire.

Village police and men from the Hoff Estates Fire-Protection District were dispatched to guard the scene and prevent injury until repair crews from Commonwealth Edison Co. arrived.

McDonald urged the board to take action against Rock Road by citing the company for an ordinance violation, and shutting down any work the firm is doing in the village until it provides assurance precautionary measures will be taken. But Rock Road has finished its present work in the village, and has not scheduled any more yet, said Boechk.

McDonald asked for a village proclamution criticizing Rock Road, and urged the board to seek advice from its attorney on what legal steps might be taken against the firm, at least to recover the cost of dispatching fire and police per-

HE ALSO SUGGESTED that the village require a company safety representative be assigned to crews at all times when work is underway in the village, and have police check periodically to be sure the representative stays on the site. The village should also establish a procedure to handle such situations before they happen, perhaps by requiring construction companies to post bonds before they start work in the village, McDonald

Boechk, who said he was embarrassed by the two incidents in such a short time span, defended his firm's precautionary measures. The driver of the truck in the first incident was suspended for two days, and the driver in the second incident, a man with a 25-year safety record, was suspended one day, he said.

"Our company is not irresponsible." said Boechk, adding that all drivers are trained and instructed to use adequate precautions to avoid such accidents. These men did not follow the instructions, he said. The company has now instituted a policy that any driver who moves his truck more than 10 feet before the dump bed is fully lowered will be dismissed immediately, he said.

Plan swim program for handicapped

A swimming program for physically handicapped adults will be opened by the Schaumburg Park District at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at Atcher Pool, Springinsguth Road south of Schaumburg Road.

The program will be held weekly through Sept. 2, and will be open to any physically handicapped resident of the district above age 18. There is no admission fee, and no limit on the number of persons who may participate. Special equipment such as braces will be allowed on the pool deck.

Although advance registration is not required, district personnel recommended that persons planning to participate call the pool at 894-8950 so that employes will know approximately how many people to expect. The program will be organized by Kathy Molbeck and Jerry Schneider, pool managers.

This is the first time the district has run a program for handicapped adults, although it has been sponsoring one for mentally handleapped children.

With parents and teachers unable to transport the children to the YMCA during the day, the children would not have been able to participate in this special program if FISH volunteers had not assisted.

"We try not to offer services on a regular basis, that's not our purpose. We are only supposed to help out in emergency cases when no other help is available. When the situation is severe enough and it calls for somewhat of a regular service to a citizen in need, we will make exceptions," said Mrs. Shrigley.

Weeds on Higgins Road causing a traffic hazard

fligh weeds in the parkway along Hig-gins Road are causing safety hazards and the state does not plan to mow them until mid-July, according to Hoffman Estates officials.

Trustees complained at Monday's village board meeting that It is difficult for motorists to see if other vehicles are approaching intersections with Higgins. They said weeds are a hazard to safe driving.

Mayor Virginia Hayter said she had told a spokesman for the state highway department that if the mowing cannot be done before July 15, they might just as well plow the ground under and cover it with asphalt. The department representative had said strips had been moved once this summer, and would be done a second time as soon as all areas within the region had been completed the first time around.

THE BOARD ALSO discussed a water supply difficulty that occurred Sunday night when wires shorted in a well control box in the Winston Knolls area. The short was caused by a family of mice that had built a nest in the box, said Trustee Melvin Timmons, who offered to send the mice to Higgins Road to chew priority area to receive that service. Estimated cost of the telemetering system for the entire village is $100,000. which was provided from the proceeds of a bond issue.

Noting the abundance of applications submitted for service on village board committees, Mrs. Hayter said many of them specified either the plan commission or zoning board of appeals. She urged trustees to encourage village residents to apply for the public information committee, which has only three members. She also noted she is reviewing five proposed ordinances to make the board's environmental committee an independent commission, and is culling what she feels are the best points from each An ordinance combining those points will be proposed to the board soon, she said.

Expect throng of thousands

Suburbs hustle for Superhorse

Get ready for a blitz.

The first wave is expected to hit at 0900 hours Saturday when a throng of 40,000 to 60,000 people will begin funneling through the turnstyles to see the country's greatest horse, Secretariat.
For that one day, Arlington Park Race

Track, Arlington Heights, Ill., will be the horse racing capital of the country.

A flurry of special preparations were reported yesterday from a variety of sources, including local police depart-ments, nearby hotels and motels, hus lines and the railroad, overseas National Air Lines and just about everyone connected with the special match race.

With the excitement there was also confusion over advance ticket sales, hotel reservations and even who Superhorse Secretariat will race against in the $100,000 event.

"WHAT MORE CAN I tell you except that we're sold out," said one advance sales ticket agent yesterday, despite the fact that tickets originally were not supposed to go on sale until today.

Even when tempted with an offer to pay "scalpers' " prices, the agent was unable to produce two clubhouse tickets.

Another ticket agent at Bond's clothing store, State and Jackson in Chicago, reported yesterday that he still had plenty of tickets. And Tom Rivera, public relations director at Arlington Park, said tickets will be available at the track today through Saturday.

"We'll have room for everybody," Rivera promised.

For the first time in history, the grassy infield at Arlington Park will be opened to spectators who don't mind passing the day on a blanket or camp stool. The price of admission to the infleid will be

Secretariat, the first Triple Crown winner in 25 years, will run in the eighth race Saturday, sometime between 5 and 5:30 p.m. The start of the first race has been moved up an hour to 1 p.m. and the day-long program will feature 10 races instead of the usual nino.

Rivera said the track is planning to have several bands on the grounds and already has ordered additional concession supplies to feed what promises to be the biggest crowd at Arlington Park

The crowd will converge on Arlington Park by train, bus and automobile and additional carriers were being scheduled

"WE ARE GOING to add an extra train on Saturday," said Richard Krehl, manager of passenger service for the Chicago and North Western Ry. "Normally we run three extra trains on Saturday, but we will definitely add a fourth."

With the extra trains will also come extra cars. Together they will be able to accommodate an additional 1,600 passen-"I hope that is enough," Krehl said.

A spokesman for Eagle Bus Lines, which brings racings fans to Arlington Park from Chicago's Loop, South and West sides, sald the company will be running 11 or 12 buses Saturday.

But most racing fans will arrive by car and it will be the job of the Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows police departments to do what they can to avoid what could be one of the worst race track traffic jams in memory.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Chief Lewis Case said he will have 10 extra men directing traffic Saturday and will assign patrol cars at special points.

Five men will be directing inbound traffic and five handling outbound cars, sald Rolling Meadows Traffic Supervisor Andrew Herbert who added that beyond that, "we're just going to play it by ear; that's all we can do."

Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber sald regular holiday race track patrols will be augmented with additional officers and that his men will be out on the street earlier than usual because of the 9 a.m. track opening.

Secretariat himself will arrive at O'Hare International Airport about 1:30 p.m. Thursday on an Overseas National Airlines charter flight. In the past Secretariat has had a DC-9 jet freighter to himself but this time he will be sharing it with four other horses and a couple of grooms, an airline spokesman said.

WHILE AT Arlington Park, the $6 million horse will be under what Rivera termed "very tight security."

Saturday's race is a bonanza for hotels and motels close to the track most of which were sold out of rooms days ago.

"We're overbooked right now," said a reservations clerk at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel, located next door to the Palatine, a desk clerk said reservations were way above normal. As preparations build toward his appearance at Arlington Park Saturday, it becomes ever more clear that Secretariat is a giant among horses, at the gate

New pupils can register at Castor Center July 30

Meadows Dist. 15 with elementary-age children may register them at the E. S. Castor Administration Center, 505 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

Registration will be from July 30 to Aug. 20. Chlidren need not accompany their parents to registration, which will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Parents will be required to show a transfer or other evidence of the previous school their child attended and an official birth certificate at the time of registration. Hospital or baptismal certificates are not acceptable proof of date of birth. In order to be eligible for kindergarten, children must be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1.

Forms that the parent will be requested to complete will ask for information concerning the name and telephone number of the local physician and of two reliable individuals in the community who can be called in case of an emergen-

New residents of Palatine-Rolling cy when the parents cannot be reached. A BOOK RENTAL fee of $10 for children in kindergarten through sixth grade and $11 for children in junior high will be collected at the time of registration.

Insurance plans for students also will be available at the time of registration. There are two plans: a $2.60 premium which provides coverage from the time the child leaves home until he returns and an $18 premium which provides 24hour coverage during the school year.

All schools in the district will be participating in a registration by mail program this year. This program will provide parents who have children in the district with information pertaining to the beginning of school. Parents will receive registration materials the second week of July.

Parents and children are invited to visit the schools the children will attend on Aug. 31 between 2 and 3:30 p.m. The first day of school is Sept. 4.

Kingman Drive to be closed to traffic

Drivers who like short cuts will no longer be able to use Kingman Drive in Hollman Estates to head east from Washington Boulevard.

The Hoffman Estates Village Board this week voted to comply with a request by Kingman residents to close their street to through traffic until the street is reconstructed next spring.

Barricades will be erected on Kingman where it intersects with Washington Houlevard and Morton Street. One end will have a full barricade, preventing any vehicular use, and the other will have a partial barricade indicating the road is for local traffic only and is a dead end street. The residents will be polled to decide which end will have the full barricade.

Last week the Kingman residents pleaded to have that section of their street completely rebuilt this summer. When they were told the street program already was approved, and it was impossible to finance any additional street rebuilding, they asked for measures limiting use of their street to residents and their guests.

Town needs 300 spaces

Eppley wants parking lot limited to village residents

by TOM VON MALDER

More than half of Mount Prospect's commuter parking spaces are filled each day by non-village residents.

For this reason, Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley says he will attempt to restrict use of the proposed Evergreen Avenue parking lot to village residents. The village is attempting to qualify for a state program to build the new lot on the Busse Florists property, north of the Chicago and North Western Rwy, tracks,

Eppley yesterday said the village has a grant reservation for the second phase of a commuter parking program developed by the Illinois Department of Transportation. The village had hoped to build 300 new spaces under the program, but the Busses have told the village they would only sell enough land for 176

Eppley sold he hopes to convince the Busses to increase the amount of land they are willing to sell so more spaces can be provided. He said there is a possibility that If the village takes out a 20year lease on the property, rather than buying it, the full 300 spaces might still be possible. The Busses want to keep ownership of part of the land for future expansion of their florist husiness, he

But no matter how many new spaces the village can get, Eppley feels strongly that they should be reserved only for residents' use. "We're spending our money for the facilities," he said, so Mount Prospect residents should get the use.

ALL OF THE surveys conducted by the village have shown that less than half of the current commuter spaces are used by village residents. Eppley said, "This is a shame."

In a municipal sticker count conducted yesterday by the Herald in the three commuter lots, it was found that only 182 out of 449 cars (40.5 per cent) had Mount Prospect stickers.

There were Arlington Heights stickers on 41 cars (9.1 per cent), Wheeling stickers on 32 (7.1 per cent), Cook County stickers on 27 (6 per cent) and 22 cars

Only two have applied for school board seat

The River Trails Dist. 26 Board has found only two residents who are interested in applying for the vacant school board seat left by James Bowes.

Bowes resigned from the school board, effective June 30, to move out of the district. He still had nine months of his term to serve when he resigned.

The two residents who applied to fill out Bowes' position are Carl Pope and Thomas Oakson.

Pope, 42, of 501 E. Highland St., has lived in Dist. 26 for 71/2 years. He said he has attended school board meetings regularly for about the last year. Pope is in charge of the plastics division at Joseph T. Ryerson & Sons, Inc.

OAKSON, 37, 1320 Peachtree Ln., has lived in the district more than 13 years. He is a principal and assistant superintendent of schools in Glenview-Northbrook Dist. 30.

According to Mary Stemortage, chait man of the River Trails General Caucus, all three candidates who ran in the April school board election have been contacted to see if they might want to apply for the board post. "I don't think Dr. (Alexander) Ronnett is interested," said Airs. Stembridge. The other two (Rhelta Baum and Robert Blomquist) said they'd think about it."

So far only Pope and Oakson have been interviewed by the Dist. 26 board for the vacancy. Board member Sylvia Lurie said the board would be glad to set up another interview session, however, if there are more persons who apply.

According to the Illinois School statutes, the school board must appoint a new board member 30 days after a member's resignation has been submitted. For Bowes' seat, this would mean July with sons, Thomas, 13, Steven, 11, and Andrew 6. The two youngest boys were born in Africa.

Minister's wife discovers a life full of surprises

by MARY HOULIHAN

When Jean Wolford looks out of her kitchen window, she sees bush villagers of Zaire, formerly the Belgian Congo in Africa, carrying water buckets and farming small gardens.

She probably finds it hard to believe that a three-year engagement by mail to a Midwest minister could ever have taken her that far.

When Jean first began dating the now-Rev. Marvin Wolford in high school in her home town of Abingdon, Ill., her only thoughts were of settling down on a farm and having a few children.

BUT TODAY, Jean Wolford, married to the Rev. Wolford almost 16 years, expects surprise as a natural element in her life. She has lived in Zaire through two nationalistic uprisings, one in 1960, the other in 1968, and somehow she's managed to continue to look like a typical minister's wife.

Mrs. Wolford and her husband were in Mount Prospect last weekend for a visit during a missionary furlough from the Congo. Most of the weekend was spent telling members from Trinity United and South Community-Baptist churches about their lives in Zaire, and their needs in the church community in which they

"We're quite fortunate. We have a Methodist hospital where we live, and electric lights," said the Rev. Wolford.

"Our main job now is translating the Bible," he said. Under the Wolfords' direction the Bible has been translated into two languages and covers the local dialects spoken by more than 10 tribes in the area in which he lives. More recently, the books of Genesis and Exodus, as well as commentary on the Old Testament have been translated and

ALONG WITH HIS many other activitles, Wolford is also a local district superintendent of the local village Methodist Church.

His story of how he traveled from Abingdon to Zaire is interesting as well as surprising. Wolford, who all his life had planned on becoming a farmer, first went to the Congo as an agricultural missionary.

Before leaving for the Congo, he had little plans for becoming any kind of misslonary. But one summer, while in college, he took a course at a university in Colorado. There, a minister leading the youth group he had joined told him about the missionary ministry.

"I told him I really wanted to farm, but he sent my name in anyway to the Board of Missions in New York, Wolford

"Several months passed and I assumed everything had fallen through and that was fine, but I heard later that summer that I had been accepted."

Despite the fact that Wolford said he wasn't really that enthusiastic about the whole idea, "I felt I should do what I should," he said, so he went. WHEN HE REACHED the Congo, he discovered that the people there were 'extremely religious." "They already believed in God as creator and in eternal life. But they didn't know anything about Christ. This is what we brought them," Wolford explained.

Despite the people's religious leanings, things were still difficult. "I tried everything I learned on the farm and nothing worked," he said, "because of the soil and climate. But then I did some experimenting and did have some suc-

It took almost the entire three years he was working in the Belgian Congo to discover his vocation. "I had a conversion experience the last year I was there. I really became a Christian in my own personal life then," he said.

After the three-year stay, he returned to the United States to marry Jean. How did she feel about moving from Abingdon

Eppley says seniors can take census

Senior citizens are eligible to be census workers if they are able to walk and climb stairs easily, according to Village

Mgr. Robert J. Eppley. With Mount Prospect's special federal census set to start in a week and a haif, only 41 applications for census workers have been received. A minimum of between 60 and 70 census workers is required for the census.

Starting July 9, applicants will be tested for sultability to work as enumerators. The village would like to have more than 100 applicants by the 0th because some applicants will not be qualified.

THE APPLICATIONS are available at Eppley's office, 112 E. Northwest Hwy. To qualify, a person must be a U.S. citizen, at least 18 years old and willing to work full-time for up to a month. He cr she need not be a resident of Mount Prospect.

Each enumerator will be paid 11 cents for every name turned in, with the average worker obtaining 209 names a day.

The village hopes the updated census will show an increase in the village's population of 45,228. If it does, the village will receive additional income from state income tax rebates and Motor Fuel Tax funds. There is also a possibility that the new figure will be used in determining the village's federal revenue sharing amount, Eppley said.

The village has a space in the program reserved but it still has to provide the state with specific plans. Eppley said the village board will have a hand in formulating those plans. The board, he said, will have to decide how the village's share (an estimated $50,000) will be fun-

Plans for a pedestrian overpass across Northwest Highway and extension of the railroad platform southeastward still have to be completed, Eppley said.

Ills solution for restricting the lot to village residents' use would be to lease spaces by the month, rather than using parking meters.

Problems with Illinois Bell?

'Hi, I'm Kathy. Phone me for service'

"I'm your service representative," the smiling, long-haired brunette says on your television screen. "If you have any problems with your phone or phone service, call me."

The congenial attitude is a common one portrayed for a TV commercial, but its message is genuine in the real-life onerations of Illinois Bell Telephone Co.'s service representatives working at 108 W. Eastman in Arlington Heights.

Each day 38 service representatives at the office each handle 40 to 50 calls ner day dealing with problems from repair service to billing complaints.

"Any question under the sun that a person might have about the phone company, that's what we get," says service representative Kathy Liga. "That's the good thing about the job, you never know what's on the other end of the phone until you pick it up."

"The function that we have is the interface between the customer and the company," according to Paul Arnolde. commercial manager at the Arlington Heights Bell office. "We have 51,000 residential accounts to handle, and each girl has about 3,200 accounts."

ARNOLDE AND his assistant, Jan McNitt, oversee the operation of the service representative staff, which assists customers with phone problems throughout Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Mount Prospect, and Elk Grove.

"There's no doubt that it takes a special kind of person for the Job of service representative." Arnolde says, "Age is not really a criterion. We've got a pretty good balance between age groups.

"The girls have to have a certain type of makeup. Diplomacy and tact, the two words that go hand in hand with customer handling, are essential," says Arnolde. Above all, he adds, the representatives must have "maturity and common

There are, of course, days when the frustrations of the job take their toll, she adds. "I think everybody cries at least once. It's not really the customer. It's mostly the frustration of not being able to help. It builds up, and I think it happens about once every three or four years. After all, nobody likes to be yelled

Both Arnolde and Mrs. McNitt point out that the role of the service rep is becoming increasingly important to the telephone company. "I think customers are becoming well aware that the operators are there to assist in placing calls and that is the extent or their job," Mrs. McNitt says.

"The service representatives are very important and they play a vital role," Arnolde adds. "This is where it all starts. She is the one who initiates the action to get the phone installed. It all starts with her. She's the sparkplug. She's the customer's advocate.

Burton Davis 'outstanding' as educator

Burton "Bud" Lewis, a science teacher at River Trails Junior High School, has been named an outstanding Secondary Educator for 1973.

Lewis, nominated by River Trails Junior High principal Gene Kukla, was selected for the honor on the basis of his professional and civic achievements. 'The fact is that he is such a dedicated teacher," said Kukia, "He works with the gifted as well as the very slow. There isn't a student that doesn't like him, as well as any teacher that doesn't like him.'

Outstanding Secondary Educators of America is an annual awards program honoring distinguished men and women for their achievements in secondary education. Each educator winning the award becomes eligible to compete for the Outstanding Secondary Educator of the Year award trophy.

Schools rewarded for vandalism curb

Three schools in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 will receive each awards from the district administration in return for a reduction in vandalism over the last year.

According to a plan put in effect by the Dist. 57 board last year, the schools will receive to per cent of the difference in the cost of vandalism between this year and last year. The money will be put into the schools' activities funds.

Lions Park School will receive $50 for a $300 reduction. Busse School will receive $49 for a $490 reduction and Fairview School, $25 for a $250 reduction.

At a recent meeting, the board also approved the cost of providing an activity bus for students at Lincoln Jr. High School next year. The bus, for students who stay after school for extracurricular activities, will make two runs, one around the north side and one around the south side of the district.

Jean was to meet her husband in New York the day he arrived from the Congo. She fully expected to be married in a church wedding, although she knew things were going to be a bit hectic with Wolford having to leave for Africa soon

But Jean got more than she bargained for. "We were married on the 'Bride and Groom' TV show," she explained, smiling. "It was wonderful for us because we didn't have any money at the time."

THE TV MARRIAGE came about when a friend of Jean's from Abingdon convinced her to write to the program, popular in the late 1950's, about her up-coming wedding. "Apparently they were interested when they heard Marvin had been in the Belgian Congo," she said.

The producers of the TV show called Jean's father one Sunday night to tell him about his plan. "My father thought it was a joke when they called. But we were married four days after Marvin got home," she said.

The TV wedding set the pace (or the madeap type of life the Wolford's were to live in the upcoming years.

She said it took her almost three years before she could communicate adequately with the people who lived in her village. "It's all you can do to adjust to a new society and keep things sanitary in your home, besides try to learn a language," she said.

HER THREE children, the last two of whom were born in Africa, had no difficulty adjusting though, "Since we're in a bush area, they have a lot of freedom out there. They get along just fine. In fact, one of the boys commented the other day that he liked the United States, 'But I wouldn't want to stay more than a year,' he said."

Superhorse!

Suburbs hustle in preparation for Saturday's crush of thousands at Arlington Park

Get ready for a biltz.

The first wave is expected to hit at 0900 hours Saturday when a throng of 40,000 to 60,000 people will begin funneling through the turnstyles to see the country's greatest horse, Secretariat.

For that one day, Arlington Park Race Track, Arlington Heights, Ill., will be the horse racing capital of the country.

A flurry of special preparations were reported yesterday from a variety of sources, including local police departments, nearby hotels and motels, bus lines and the railroad, overseas National Air Lines and just about everyone connected with the special match race.

With the excitement there was also confusion over advance ticket sales, hetol reservations and even who Superhorse Secretariat will race against in the $100,000 ovent.

"WHAT MORE CAN I tell you except that we're sold out," said one advance sales ticket agent yesterday, despite the fact that tickets originally were not supposed to go on sale until today.

Even when tempted with an offer to pay "scalpers" " prices, the agent was unable to produce two clubhouse tickets.

Another ticket agent at Bond's clothing store, State and Jackson in Chicago, reported yesterday that he still had plenty of tickets. And Tom Rivera, public relations director at Arlington Park, said tickets will be available at the track today through Saturday.

"We'll have room for everybody," Rivera promised.

For the first time in history, the grassy infield at Arlington Park will be opened to spectators who don't mind passing the day on a blanket or camp stool. The price of admission to the infield will be

Secretariat, the first Triple Crown winner in 25 years, will run in the eighth race Saturday, sometime between 5 and 5:30 p.m. The start of the first race has been moved up an hour to 1 p.m. and the day-long program will feature 10 races instead of the usual nine.

Rivera said the track is planning to have several bands on the grounds and aiready has ordered additional concession supplies to feed what promises to be the biggest crowd at Arlington Park

The crowd will converge on Arlington Park by train, bus and automobile and additional carriers were being scheduled yesterday.

"WE ARE GOING to add an extra train on Saturday," said Richard Krehl, manager of passenger service for the Chicago and North Western Ry. "Normally we run three extra trains on Saturday, but we will definitely add a fourth."

With the extra trains will also come extra cars. Together they will be able to accommodate an additional 1,600 passen-

"I hope that is enough," Krehl said.

A spokesman for Eagle Bus Lines, which brings racings fans to Arlington Park from Chicago's Loop, South and West sides, said the company will be running 11 or 12 buses Saturday.

But most racing fans will arrive by car and it will be the job of the Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows police departments to do what they can to avoid what could be one of the worst race track traific jams in memory.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Chief Lewis Case said he will have 10 extra men directing traffic Saturday and will assign patrol cars at special points.

Five men will be directing inbound traffic and five handling outbound cars, said Rolling Meadows Traffic Supervisor Andrew Herbert who added that beyond that, "we're just going to play it by ear; that's all we can do.'

Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber said regular hollday race track patrols will be augmented with additional officers and that his men will be out on the street earlier than usual because of the 9 a.m. track opening.

Secretariat himself will arrive at O'Hare International Airport about 1:30 p.m. Thursday on an Overseas National Airlines charter flight. In the past Secretariat has had a DC-9 jet freighter to himself but this time he will be sharing it with four other horses and a couple of grooms, an airline spokesman said. WHILE AT Arlington Park, the $6 mil-

Algonquin-Wilke, Euclid-Wilke crossings accident traps

Are these problem intersections being ignored?

by JOE SWICKARD

Any motorist who has waited at Wilke Road for a chance to dash into the fast flow of traffic on Algonquin Road would probably say a traffle light there would be a welcome addition to the intersection.

Despite 113 auto accidents in the past 214 years, there are no plans for such traffic control signals.

And anyone who has been trapped in traffic at Wilke Road and Euclid Avenue while the other drivers sort out the right-of-way through the fourway stop would probably say traffic lights would ease matters.

DESPITE 70 auto accidents in the past 212 years, there are no plans for such traffic control signals.

Roger DeLong, owner of a service station on the corner of New Wilke and Algonquin roads, watched the traffic speed by and said, "Yeah, it's pretty bad here. There have been lots of accidents and a lot more near misses. I'd say there have been about 20 crashes in the year and a half I've been here."

SGT. JACK WEBER, of the Arlington Heights Police Traffic Division. while admitting to a serious situaton at the intersection, at first said De-Long's count was too high.

But a check through the files showed the station operator's estimate acceptable. Eight traffic accidents involving at least property damage to the cars have been handled by the Arlington Heights police in the first half of the year.

Weber said a more accurate indicator of the problem would be a total of accidents on both New and Old Wilke roads at Algonquin. "When you take both together, you have 44 accidents since January, 1971. And those are just the ones our department has handled. Rolling Meadows shares the patrol with us there," Weber said.

Andy Herbert, Rolling Meadows police traffic supervisor said his department had handled 69 accidents at the two intersections since January, 1971.

BOTH WEBER and Herbert said the accident rate was low until 1971. Development of the area with apartments and shopping areas with accompanying increased traffic flow have contributed to the soaring statistics, they said.

Rolling Meadows Ald. James Huddleston (4th), who has staunchly fought for traffic control devices at the Wilke-Algonquin intersection located in his ward, said he is gathering material on accident rates at the intersection to send to Springfield.

sion of highways to approve traffic lights at the intersection. According to Weber, several factors contribute to the number of accidents other than the increased number of cars.

Huddleston hopes to prompt the divi-

"The driver turning left from Wilke has to watch four lanes of fast traffic. This is in addition to having two left turn lanes. The car next to you may start out so you do, too, without a clear field of vision," he said.

The type of traffic on Algonquin is another problem, he said.

"THERE MIGHT BE a truck on the outside lane and it would appear you can make the turn. But, on the inside lane, a car is passing that truck and you don't see it."

Allen Sander, Arlington Heights village engineer, said there are no plans for establishing traffic lights at the intersection at the present time, although he said it's a known dangerous crossing.

The problems blocking traffic control signals are many fold.

Weber explained, "Algonquin is a state road (Illinois Rte. 62) running through two municipalities. And the county plans to complete the link of New Wilke to Golf Road sometime

So what is now a three-way intersection will shortly become a fourway intersection without stop lights.

"We expect a significant increase in the flow of traffic when the link is completed. It'll be a major northsouth route through the village. Now, we only have Arlington licights Road," he said.

WEBER SAID the village would have to make a survey of the traffic flows and patterns before applying for state warrants for the signals.

"In layman's terms, a warrant is a detailed study of suggested apparatus, in this case a light system. You need to know the number of cars over a number of hours and the pos-

"It is my guess that the state warrants would be met when they com-plete the link. We'll get a lot of movement then," he speculated.

HUDDLESTON SAID a plan is being considered to fund traffic lights under the federal TOPICS highway program. Under the plan. the city could apply to share the cost of the light with the state and with Arlington Heights,

The state would pay half the cost of the light while the municipalities would each pay one-quarter, Huddieston said.

The plan, however, is still in the discussion stage since Huddleston isn't sure whether the lights would be placed at New Wilke Road and Algonguln or Old Wilke Road and Al-

Two miles north of the Wilke-Algonquin situation is the four-way stop at Wilke and Euclid Avenue.

Traffle from the race track, expressway and Northwest Highway converge here for a battle of nerves.

DRIVERS OFTEN try to bluff their way through by taking advantage of another car making a turn. A polite driver often finds that when he gives the go-shead to an on-coming car to make a left turn, he has opened the way for drivers on the cross road to make a dash for it.

Since 1971, the game of bluff and back down has resulted in 70 auto accidents.

Again, the Intersection involves Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights jurisdiction.

Blood donor station to be set up Monday

A blood donor station will be set up from 4 to 7 p.m. Monday, July 2 at the Municipal Building, 23 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Persons interested in donating a pint of blood and thus ensuring themselves and their family an unlimited supply of free blood should they need it, are asked to clip the coupon and send it to the Village of Arlington Heights, Blood Coordinator, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Arlington fleights is affiliated with the North Suburban Blood Bank's 4 per cent program under which the entire population of the village is guaranteed free blood if 4 per cent of the residents, some 2,800 people, donate one pint of blood.

"We have three of the four corners and 60 accidents," Weber said.

Rolling Meadows controls the southwest corner and has handled 10 accidents since the beginning of 1971, Herbert said.

SANDER SAID no studies have been made concerning traffic lights here, either.

Although this one is also recognized as a bad corner, Sander said no money has been budgeted so there will be no corrective measures in the next year or two.

Sander also said "there has been no pressure" from citizens to install lights at the corners.

Once again, any future traffic lights would be the result of cooperation between Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and the state, he said.

HERE TOO, Weber sees nothing but a large increase in the traffic flow once the link to Golf Road is completed.

Given the factors of increased traffic and an absence of state warrants, the situations along Wilke Road will only get worse.

Until such time as traffic lights are installed, drivers would be advised to follow the late Vince Lombardi's maxim for a successful power sweep: "Run to daylight."

Coronets tops in state meet

Composed of 85 high school-aged girls in Dist. 214, the drill team competed against nine other teams from Illinois at Elk Grove High School, scoring 86.0 out of a possible 100 points. The second place winner was the R-Lettes of Round Lake with a score of 77.

The Coronets are directed by Lynn and George Lindstrom of Kenosha, Wis. and are co-sponsored by the Arlington Heights Elks Club, V.F.W. Post 961 and the American Legion Post 208.

The drill team's 85 members were scored for appearance and performance by four field judges. Each group starts with 100 points and judges take 1/10 of a point for each fault.

The Coronets will be participating in other competitions and invitationals this summer in Colorado and Wyoming. In August, the team will attempt to defend its national championship title in the VFW national competition in New Or-

"They work awfully hard in their practice," said Herb Carl, father of one of the girls. "They have practiced hundreds of hours before this competition."
